The Proposed New Territory of Arizona—Texas Claims—Mediterranean Squadron.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 11.

The signers of the memorial presented to the House to-day for the erection of Arizona into a Territorial Government represent that they are out off by natural barriers from the benefit of the laws of New-Mexico—being nominally only in the County of Doña Ana, without any of the privileges of citizenship, and exposed to savages. They ask their delegate now here to be admitted.

Nearly $[illegible]00 of Texas claims outstanding are not yet presented at the Treasury.

The Star announces that the steamship for the Mediterranean squadron will sail from New-York about the 15th of January.

Continuation of the Debate on the President's Message—Shortening the Cruises of Naval Vessels, &c.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 10, 1856.

THE DEBATES IN CONGRESS.

The debate upon the President's Message was continued, to-day, in both Houses of Congress. In the Senate Mr. PUGH, of Ohio, essayed a Constitutional argument to show that the principle of the Kansas-Nebraska bill is a true one, and that no supporter of the Constitution of the United States can refuse to stand upon it. This was the chief idea of his speech; but it was incidentally a defence of the positions assumed by the President. Mr. PUGH is a young man, and ambitious of distinction. He came to the Senate with some reputation as a stump speaker, which he seems desirous of exchanging for that of a lawyer. Among men of larger experiences at the bar, and in public life, he is admitted to be a pretty good technical lawyer; but his arguments are wanting in profundity, and are found exceedingly shallow when one attempts to sound them.

PUGH ON SQUATTER SOVEREIGNTY.

Thus, to-day, his argument was in substance that, although Congress possessed the "eminent domain" of the Territories, and all the powers incident to sovereignty except that of legislation, that particular power does not rest in the national Legislature. He did not affirm positively where the power does lie; but, of course, he maintains that it is with the people of the Territory. He evidently overlooked the fact that his "Squatter Sovereignty" argument expends whatever force it has directly in the face of the Southern doctrine. But, admitting his conclusion to be true, let us apply it. It is this: Congress has no power to legislate for the Federal Territory, that power not being an incident of the ownership of the soil,—the eminent domain. Suppose there are no occupants of the Territory other than Indians, who shall legislate for it, or govern it, then? There are no white men to fulfill that office,—is it then without law? Has Congress no right to prescribe a law for it? Or suppose there are five white men there,—are they to form its Government and make its laws? If not, when and where precisely does the power of the people to legislate begin? What precise number of white men within a territory is the lowest limit at which they may begin to exercise the Squatter's sovereignty. The argument of Mr. PUGH is absurd; and that I have cited is a fair sample of his speech.

SPEECHES OF WASHBURNE AND GIDDINGS.

In the House, Mr. WASHBURNE, of Maine, made an earnest and telling speech in answer to the Message, and was followed by Mr. GIDDINGS, in one of his best speeches. [From the London Times, Nov. 2.

[illegible] Neuchatel? Asked anybody. [illegible] As for our public-school boys, perhaps [illegible] next [illegible] would answer at once [illegible] "to be sure." Look to the maps; there [illegible] Neuchatel. [illegible] would say something was wanting. But [illegible] is in dispute, [illegible] by the most ungeographical State in the world. Prussia, that lies in [illegible] over the map of Europe, like the fragments of a [illegible] says that Neuchatel is hers, and actually talks of recovering it by force of arms. We have already given the story of her pretensions; how, little more than a century ago, by dint of hard bribing, she got a very bad title to a very equivocal acknowledgment by Europe; how the said protectorship, even then an unwieldy property, was afterwards knocked about in the wars of the Revolution, given by BONAPARTE to SARRAZIN, and only returned at last to Prussia in about the same condition as the curious old title to the kingdom of Jerusalem, extant somewhere [illegible] at the great crash in 1848 what was left of the thing, a coat of arms, or a parti-colored post, was thrown down, and Prussia was congratulated on having saved a property which consisted in the expense of bribing a clique of partisans. In the course of this year the said partisans, having among them one or two people who find no favor in the eyes of the Republicans, seized the bit of a [illegible] in the picturesque little quadrangle in which the Swiss government is carried on. The next day they were stifled like wasps in their own nest, and the leaders put in durance, for there is a numerous, independent population in the neighborhood, besides a Federal camp on the shores of the lake, which leave the little city itself small choice in the question. Nothing was more simple, but the King of Prussia, who has been obliged to acquiesce in one of the normal houses ever since 1848, now declares that such the rebels shall be released without trial, and the Federal Council has unanimously refused to do so, though ready to negotiate with Prussia on civil terms.

So the peace of Europe is really threatened for this bit of [illegible] suddenly! To call the thing an old [illegible] is to give it more honor than it deserves, for there are many "relics" with very remarkable histories, going back many centuries. This thing was no better than a forgery a hundred and fifty years ago. Then its history forgotten, and copies of it [illegible] to be the original of a much earlier date, so that the antiquity of a hundred and fifty years done to enhance much the value of the forgery. In modern times Other value it has none. At Neuchatel the King of Prussia is simply an impostor, like the man that claims some English properties, coming down every now and once in five years, to the park gate or the hall door and declaring himself the true heir-at-law. He hangs lower there, except with Count Pourtalès and a few other people who are in the same boat with His Majesty, and are so committed to the folly that they have not the strength of mind to back out. His weight in the hearts of the population consists in his being classed with those things on the earth and below this earth which the inhabitants of the little State have been in the habit of denouncing from their youth. The name, then, is all that he demands, and it is about as much a name as the kingdom of France, which survived in our own Royal Family till within the lifetime of many of us. For this bit of a name, this yard nomina umbra, for this [illegible] of importance, this "record" of a prior conviction, the King of Prussia threatens to light up the flame of war over Europe. It is true that he has no such intention, and that he does not roar without giving the house due warning that he is not a real lion. But playing at going to war sometimes ends in war, just as many a poor lad has lost his life by playing at hanging. The Swiss are rude fellows, and, while His Majesty is only blustering, they might do something that even the King of Prussia could not swallow, and it is quite possible that Austria, Bavaria, [illegible] might not be able to back out as easily as they expect.

The present prisoners are that they rose in arms against the actual Government of Neuchâtel. That Government had existed for several years, and, whatever communications had passed between the State, the Federation, and the Prussian Government, there had been no actual attempt on the part of Prussia to disturb the order of things. All at once a few exiles, headed by an Aide de-Camp of the King, made a ridiculous insurrection, which cost somebody a good many wounds, and a good deal of trouble. As Neuchâtel and Switzerland had recognized the then existing Government, they could not but regard these men as banditti and rebels, and to liberate them at the demand of the King of Prussia would have been simply to acknowledge themselves the criminals. Indeed, consistency would have required that, together with the release of the prisoners, the good people of Neuchâtel should invite a Prussian Viceroy, and send a deputation of their most substantial citizens, with halters round their necks, to Potsdam. The Swiss are not the people to stultify themselves in this fashion, so, at all events, they will first bring these men to trial, and then think what to do. This, however, is the very thing the King of Prussia wants to anticipate, if possible. He seems to have a mysterious horror of a trial. This is intelligible. With a trial comes examination, reading of letters, and perhaps confessions. Indeed, it is the King of Prussia that is to be tried, as well as Count Pourtalès and his friends. No doubt this will be very unpleasant to His Majesty, and he will be kept on thorns till the trial is over. His remedy, however, is a very simple one, and substantially it is the course he must come to at last, so he may as well take it while he can with some sort of [illegible]

From the Paris Correspondence of the London Times.

Facts have come to my knowledge to-day which go far to explain the confidence with which the Nord of Brussels expects that Russia has not given way a jot in regard to the Bolgrad question, and that she still insists that it must be referred to the decision of a Congress. Although my information is filtered through a Russian channel, I have not the least doubt of its correctness. I am told that within the last few days immense efforts have been made, and not without success, to bring an unconstitutional influence to bear upon the decision of the English Cabinet. A plausible proposition, emanating from France, and approved of at Berlin, is at this moment under consideration in London, backed by a weight of that German element in the councils of St. James' which it is sometimes extremely difficult for any Minister to resist. This is the scheme: Out of that tender consideration for the honor of Russia, to which English honor was but too much sacrificed in the Paris Congress, it is suggested that she must not be called upon to rescind the resolution she has expressed, not to yield Bolgrad without the decision of a new Congress. But then, by way of a tempting bait, a promise is implied, if not actually made, that France will answer for a majority of votes in favor of the English view, and that the meeting of the Congress shall in fact be merely a solemn farce, since it will be called upon to register a foregone conclusion. This project may doubtless recommend itself to certain minds as an eminently peace-making device. But I have reason to know that the English Cabinet, if left free to act upon its own opinion, would not accept it, because it feels that while called upon to make an important sacrifice of principle, and to yield a point in the first instance, it has no sufficient security against trickery when the Congress should meet. It is very possible that the ministry may need all the support of the public in England upon this question within a very short time.

Alleged Solution of the Neapolitan Question.

A letter from Vienna, of the 22d, in the Bourse Gazette, of Berlin, says: "Private letters from Naples, and the official communications of our Ambassador, General de MARTINI, agree in announcing the [illegible] solution of the Neapolitan affair, King FERDINAND having decided on making the necessary concessions. An extensive amnesty is being prepared, and orders have already been given to the tribunals to designate the persons under prosecution [illegible] be pardoned. The Ministry of Justice has [illegible] the reforms which are to be introduced [illegible] judicial justice, and a decree setting them forth [illegible] to be promulgated. We learn that our Cabinet has communicated these facts to the Cabinets of [illegible] and London. As soon as the King of Naples [illegible] have taken the first steps in the spirit thus indicated, English and French vessels of war will cease to cruise before the ports of Naples and Sicily, the amnesty and the projected reforms will be published, and the differences will so be terminated."

Scandals Caused in Madrid by Mr. Buchanan's Election.

From the Paris Correspondence of the London Times.

The nomination of Mr. BUCHANAN as President of the United States has caused considerable sensation in Madrid, as he is looked upon, rightly or wrongly, as the patron of the filibusters, and as determined to have Cuba by hook or by crook. There is a [illegible] which, I think, deserves more attention than has been given to it, and which may have greater and speedier consequences than is imagined. I allude to the relative position of the Spanish portion of St. Domingo with Spain and the United States. The United States are doing everything to please or cajole the Dominicans, even promising them complete protection against the Haytians, if they will only allow the introduction of a colony, which, in itself, well serve as a wall against Hayti. On the other hand, Spain, through the instrumentality of her Consul, Señor SAGOVIA, is doing everything he can to disgust the Dominicans, to reduce their resources, to tie their hands, and to force them into the arms of the Americans. The accession to power of the present Government saved Spain at least from one filibustering expedition, which seems inconceivable to the Spanish Cabinet. The last Cabinet, at the connivance of its Foreign Minister, PATRON DIAZ, was [illegible] going to send a fleet to Naples to protect [illegible] they had completely forgotten the [illegible] manner in the which the French General, at the time of the siege of Rome, wrote to Gen. Gomez, (the Gran Capitan,) at Terracina, to say that if the Spanish army advanced further he would fire into them. I presume the same thing would [illegible] have taken place in the Bay of [illegible]

[illegible] Lawlaw and Minister when the above was [illegible] and he probably heard a similar remonstrance [illegible] expedition.

An American Corvette in the Mediterranean.

From the Condensed Correspondence of the London Times.

Yesterday morning the American sailing corvette Constellation, 24, came into the Golden Horn, and exchanged salutes with the Admiral of Turkey. The appearance of a man-of-war not belonging to the allies caused rather an excitement, especially as the first report had enlarged her into a 60-gun frigate, for how could a Russian man-of-war be excluded from the Dardanelles if the straits were not closed to an American? But she belongs to the class of smaller vessels which have always received permission to come up even in times of peace for an occasional visit.

Sale of the Wreck of the American Packet Ship Samuel M. Fox.

From the Liverpool Courier.

On Saturday, the wreck of the packet-ship Samuel M. Fox was sold by auction at the office of Messrs. PERCIVAL, CAMPBELL & Co., brokers, Exchange-street east. The vessel was offered as she now lies stranded on Burbo Bank, together with any stores or materials that may be found on board. She is 1,345 tons measurement, and was built in 1850, by Mr. W. H. WEBB, of New-York. The cargo consists of iron rails, pig and sheet iron, tin plates, bale goods, hardware, &c., a portion of which has been saved. By the conditions of sale the purchaser will receive a salvage of 50 per cent. on all such cargo as may be saved and landed at Liverpool. The sale was largely attended by brokers and others who speculate in property of this description. The vessel was put up at the sum of £100, and after some small advances had been made on this amount the bidding became very spirited. The price ultimately reached £3,000; and there being no advance, the vessel was knocked down for that sum to Mr. J. BURN, marine store dealer. The success of the speculation must of course depend upon whether the purchaser succeeds in recovering the vessel and saving any material portion of the cargo.

Vessels frozen up in the Baltic.

From the Berlin (Nov. 28.) Correspondence of the London Times.

Winter has set in at the northern capitol of the Russian Empire much earlier this year than usual. During the whole period of 141 years in which account has been kept, the Neva has only been sixteen times frozen over in the first half of the month of November; and it was only in 1812 that this took place so early as this year, viz: the 10th inst. The suddenness and severity also with which it set in enabled it to overtake and make prisoners some fifty or sixty vessels which had already cleared out of the inner bay and anchored off the Tolboukin Light, to the great surprise of their crews. These suddenly found themselves inclosed in ice on the 10th inst. Soon afterwards, however, a stiff north-east wind blew the ice out of the inner bay and set at liberty most of these ice-bound vessels; but one of them, however (the Ceres) was so damaged by the floating ice that she sank. At the same time the wind, which released all those that were lying in deep water, brought many others aground that were lying at the time in the so-called Little Road between Cronslot and Fort Menschikoff, for the effect of a high wind blowing either way in that narrow channel is to increase or diminish its depth by several feet. The captains of such vessels as did not come under the beneficial influence of this stiff northeaster, and were not thus blown out of their difficulties, have, in most cases, where they did not lie too far from the open water, contracted with laborers to have passages sawn for them through the ice—an operation that costs about 150 roubles silver for each vessel, though it still requires a further combination of favorable circumstances to enable them to avail themselves of the opening. All further export from St. Petersburg was, of course, at an end; but bargains for exports next Spring are reported as having been made to very considerable amounts. On the other hand, the plentiful falls of snow that took place on the nights of the 11th, 12th and 13th, provided the home traffic with every possible facility for sledge traveling and conveyance.

The Bank of England—An Immediate Reduction in the Rate of Discount Anticipated.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Nov. 27.

Although the desirableness of an immediate reduction of the rate of discount is generally admitted, great doubt appears to prevail as to its being adopted by the Bank this week. The Bank Directors being the only persons who can judge of the returns which will appear in next Friday's Gazette, it is possible they may have reasons for delay which cannot yet be appreciated; but, supposing these returns to present favorable features, their hesitation to give relief from the exceptional pressure which has lately prevailed will be regarded by many with disappointment. There is no branch of the industry of the country which can remain unaffected by the existing state of the money market, while with such firms as are under heavy commitments based upon calculations of an average rate of discount it constitutes a daily question of actual loss to be sustained. To Railway Companies and other public bodies requiring at regular periods to raise large sums on debentures it is likewise a formidable point. One plea in favor of hesitation will probably be that it is desirable to give time to ascertain if the firmer tone of the Continental exchanges will be maintained; but, notwithstanding the feeling that if there is any room for doubt it is always better to err on the side of caution, the matter is too important for delay to be justified on merely conjectural grounds. It must likewise be borne in mind that just in proportion as the present rate is upheld beyond its natural and proper term, the re[illegible] will be more sharp[illegible] contingency always to be guarded against as [illegible] Continental ex[illegible] any hard to cause [illegible] not necessary [illegible] they should remain in force [illegible] addition it is to disclose all the information and a great portion of the Californian [illegible] that fell due to fortunately, counteracts itself with the surplus that may remain. As regards the rates of discount now in force upon the continent, they undoubtedly fall to warrant the maintenance of 7 per cent. in London. At Paris first-class paper can be negotiated at 5¾, at Vienna, Frankfort and Amsterdam 5 per cent. is the general charge, at Hamburg it is 6 and in Belgium 4 per cent. We are, therefore, altogether out of harmony with the rates of other commercial cities, and while on the one hand it is true that the recent approach to a recovery of confidence throughout Europe is yet far from having made such progress as to remove all doubt as to its being permanent, there is on the other enough to authorize a favorable movement for the present, and nothing to prevent the step being retraced if even in a short time such a course should be found desirable.

From the London Times (City Article) Nov. 28.

Although the Bank of England have abstained from any reduction of their rate of discount, the funds have again been very firm to-day, closing at a further advance of a quarter ⅜ cent. Consols for money, which left off last evening at 94@¼, opened at 94¼@⅜. From this they temporarily receded to 94⅛, but the market, supported by the advices from the Paris Bourse, soon resumed its firmness, and the last operations were at 94¼@⅜ for money, and 94⅜@⅝ for the 4th of December. For the new account on the 8th of January the final price was 95@⅝. During the day the Bank gave notice that they would be prepared to advance money on Government securities till the January account, at their current rate of 7 ⅜ cent., and this removal of the recent resolution against making advances upon stock on any terms was accepted as a favorable indication. The proceeding, however, has always been customary during the shuttings for the dividends. For some time past exaggerated reports have been circulated of the Bank having taken loans on stock; and, although the amounts so withdrawn from the market are believed really to have been insignificant, the assumption that they will now be repaid may, probably, be expected to increase the tendency to confidence. The amount of business during the day was unimportant. Money, although obtainable on short loans at 5¼ ⅜ cent., was not freely offered, and for loans till January the rate was 6¼ ⅛ cent. The telegraphic accounts from China, announcing a decline in the demand for silver, exercised a favorable influence, and strengthened the prevailing impression that under existing circumstances the bank rate of discount is needlessly high. Bank Stock closed at 215¾@217¼; Reduced, 93@⅝; New Three ⅜ Cents., 96⅜@⅝; India Stock, 225@228; Exchequer Bonds, 98⅜@99; India Bonds, 2s. dis. to 2s. pm.; and Exchequer Bills, 2s.@5s. pm.

In the Discount market to-day the demand was moderate at rates ranging from a ⅜ to a ¼ ⅜ cent. below those of the Bank. At the Bank, it was understood the applications, although limited, were more numerous than during the last two or three days.

Plan of Lieut. Pim for a Renewed Search for the Survivors of the Franklin Expedition.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, held in London, Lieutenant PIM, R. N., the traveler, read a paper on the possibility of elucidating the mystery of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN and his party. Alluding to the discovery of relics by Dr. RAE, Lieutenant PIM says: Not the smallest vestige of human remains was found, and there is not a particle of evidence to prove the death of even one man belonging to FRANKLIN's ship since they sailed from Beechy Island. The case now stands thus; undoubted relics of the FRANKLIN expedition have been found, and from them an inference is drawn which points to a certain locality as the position of the missing ships: that locality, I think every one agrees, is King William Land. Thus research is limited to a comparatively small extent of country, and as the settlements of the Esquimaux must have been reached by FRANKLIN's men as evidenced by their possession of the relics, it is more than probable some of the party may yet be living domesticated among these tribes. With such a certain indication to guide us, is it not more than strange that our efforts in the search have slackened, in fact, I grieve to say, ceased altogether? This naturally brings me to the plan of search I am anxious to propose to this society. The scheme is a comprehensive one, and cannot, I think, fail of success. A small screw vessel, with a complement of twenty men, to penetrate as far down Peel Sound as possible, take up Winter quarters, and, assisted by teams of dogs purchased at Disco or Uppernavik, extend the search down both shores of the Sound. Another vessel, similarly equipped, to push through Behring's Straits, and winter at King William Land, whilst an overland party descend the Great Fish River, with orders to make for a certain rendezvous, [illegible]

BARING, BROS. & CO.

Liverpool Breadstuff Market.

Per Africa. LIVERPOOL, Friday, Nov. 28, 1856—P. M.

The arrivals from the United States and Canada since Friday last have been on a liberal scale, and the week's import sums up 44,025 quarters WHEAT, 19,013 barrels of FLOUR, and 17,790 quarters INDIAN CORN. Our market has been dull during the week, country millers restricting their operations as much as possible, owing to the stagnant state of the FLOUR trade. WHEAT, however, has been in good demand for export to Spain and Portugal, which has prevented any decline of consequence in prices. FLOUR about maintains former rates, but the demand has been by no means active. CORN has been neglected, and prices rather in favor of buyers, still there has been no pressure to sell, and buyers could be found in quantity at anything under present rates.

The following were the farmers deliveries of Wheat for this week..... 97,958 quarters, at 63s. 3d.

Ditto corresponding week

last year..... 184,952 quarters, at 82s. 1d.

At to-day's Market there was only a thin attendance of town dealers and millers from the country. WHEAT met a fair demand for consumption at the prices of Friday last, although upon some low qualities of red rather less money was, in some instances taken. Several parcels were again taken for export, and the tone of the market was firm at the close. We quote new Western red 8s. 2d.@8s. 4d.; Milwaukee, 8s. 6d.@8s. 9d.; Southern from 8s. 10d to 9s. 1d.; and white from 9s. 3d. to 10s. ⅜ 45 lbs, according to quality. FLOUR was not very salable, still prices were not lower; our last quotations may, therefore, be repeated. INDIAN CORN met with very little attention, and the tendency was rather downwards. Mixed can be had at 39s.@39s. 6d.; yellow at 39s. 6d.@40s. 9d.; and white 34s.@35s. ⅜ 480 lbs.

LIVERPOOL, Friday, Nov. 28, 1856—P. M.

PROVISIONS—With the exception of an auction sale of damaged, very few transactions have taken place in Beef, but as the season advances holders are increasingly anxious to get out of stock. Pork—About 1,000 bbls. of the recent French import sold at 65s. Bacon—The trade are anxiously expecting the arrivals of new, the first lots of which are likely to bring extreme prices. Cheese—For all except very fine quality the demand is slow.

LARD—The market continues bare. Ten tons from an outport brought 58s. ⅜ cwts, and sales of Irish to arrive have been made at same price.

TALLOW—With a good demand and the closing of Baltic navigation, has again advanced, 59s 6d. having been paid for P. Y. C. 60s. would be readily paid for good North American; and with the very light stock of all kinds a further advance is probable.

Louis Lacroix, the Rocky Mountain Trapper.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

ST. PAUL, Saturday, Nov. 1, 1856.

I have lately met with a veteran Rocky Mountain hunter—a veritable specimen of the genus trapper—a man who has spent his whole life in threading the mazes of our western wildernesses; who for twenty-six years never visited a white settlement, and for eleven years was constantly trapping on the Rocky Mountains, in the employ of the American Fur Company, who stood upon the site of San Francisco long before the golden riches of California were discovered, and passed five years about great Salt Lake before it was desecrated by the Mormons; who has seen the names carved by LEWIS and CLARK upon the trees on the tributaries of the Columbia; and, in a word, who is as familiar with the mountains, rivers, and prairies of this vast extent of country as an old resident is with the streets, parks and public buildings of his native city.

This old forest-ranger, now verging on to 60 years, LOUIS LACROIX by name, resides with his Indian wife about 40 miles from St. Paul, which he thinks quite near enough to the abodes of civilization; but he occasionally calls in to see us, and tells marvelous stories of his hair-breadth 'scapes, daring exploits and encounters with the terrible Blackfeet; his warfare with hunger and the elements; his frequent campaigns with the renowned KIT CARSON and other famous hunters; and last, but not least, his excursions and explorations under the leadership of the Pathfinder of the Rocky Mountains.

He esteemed FREMONT as their very prince of good leaders—"entirely brave and a fine gentleman," to use his own words; when any feat of hardihood or danger was to be accomplished, he was ever first and foremost of his little band—"always at the head of his party;" did they meet a troop of hostile Indians, oftentimes he advanced alone to meet them, and disarmed their hostility by his manly courage. He "never asked anything of his men that he was not willing to do himself;" shared all their burdens and hardships, and "divided his meat" with them if there was any scarcity. I inquired if the men were attached to him? "Oh yes," said he, with enthusiasm, "all were willing to be killed for him." I expressed some incredulity; "Why, yes, certainly they were, to be sure—all of them," said he with renewed animation. Did KIT CARSON like him too? "Yes, all, all liked him," as if not to do so was an impossibility. "I asked if he would vote for FREMONT for President? "I expect I will," he replied, with a vivacity and assurance which left no doubt of his determination.

As I looked upon his beaming countenance, which spoke more plainly than his broken and imperfect English the love and admiration glowing in his soul, it reminded me of the kindred feeling said to be enkindled in the hearts of NAPOLEON's old soldiers at the mention of his name; heroic qualities, tested in circumstances that try men's souls, must win admiration, whether manifested in the shock of embattled armies, or in the surprise of a savage foe; and the veteran mountaineer was only giving expression, in his humble way, to a universal sentiment of very pardonable hero-worship. He was with FREMONT in three trips over the great backbone of our country, and his testimony is only a drop to swell the tide of favor for the people's champion of the heaven-born principles of right and justice.

The hale old hunter says he is getting tired of civilized life; his honest soul recoils from contact with the scheming pale faces, and he is soon to retire again to the country of the buffalo, to follow his old congenial calling; he is one of the few relics of that class of men soon to pass away forever, whose everyday realities were fraught with incidents both tragic and comic, more interesting than the wildest creations of fancy. But their mission has been fulfilled, the country around the Rocky Mountains is no longer a terra incognita, and they have been the guides to him who held the torch of science that illuminated its hidden mysteries. Nor will they wholly die, for the pen of IRVING has embalmed them in the memories of us all, and their own names, imperishably attached to their various mountain passes and peaks and the rivers where they trapped, will yet hand them down to future generations.

JUDGE MCLEAN.—We noticed during the late campaign a paragraph going the rounds of the Democratic press, to the effect that Judge MCLEAN had declared himself favorable to the election of BUCHANAN. The same declaration is now reproduced in the recent letter of JOHN VAN BUREN to the Boston committee of invitation. We are authorized to give this assertion an explicit denial, and to say that the Judge voted an open ticket for FREMONT and DAYTON.—Newark Mercury.

[illegible] Proprietors of Boston Courier [illegible] final Trial in the Supreme Court [illegible] Case of Sam Lothrop and [illegible] plaintiff—Motion for New Trial [illegible] Court—The New Hampshire Mechanic's Bank—Charge of Embezzlement [illegible] Fremont in Boston.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Monday, Dec. 8, 1856.

The proprietors of the Boston Courier, the Fillmore organ, are bankrupt financially as well as politically, and have held their first meeting in insolvency. The paper has been partially sustained by contributions since 1852, when it withdrew support from Gen. SCOTT, and will continue to be so supported. Its principal Editor, SAMUEL KNAPP, Esq., a person of taste and talent, died several months ago, since which event the leading column has been supplied after the manner in which Universal Histories and Encyclopædias are compiled, "by an association of gentlemen."

A murder trial, exciting much interest, has just terminated at the Supreme Court for Dedham County. The perpetrator, JOHN SANCHOY, a negro, in a fit of intoxication, killed by a blow with an iron bar, in August last, Mr. HENRY SWETZER, of West Roxbury, who was at the moment interfering to prevent the drunken man from maltreating a woman. The Jury found a verdict of manslaughter, and Judge DAWES pronounced a sentence of twenty years' imprisonment, the extreme limit of the extent allowed by law.

Another interesting criminal trial is still progressing in the United States Circuit Court before Judge SPRAGUE. The ship Josephine, one of our finest large half-clippers, belonging to Gen. JOSEPH ANDREWS of Salem, sailed for America from Calcutta in May last. Being short of hands, during her stay in that port several Lascars had been shipped for the voyage. The captain, Mr. FREDERICK LEEDHOLM, apparently a Swede or Dane, commanded her on the outward passage, and is a person in whose energy and capability the owner reposes entire trust. The Lascars, being all Mahometans, and none of them understanding English sensibly or speaking it intelligibly, messed together, as usual, having their own cook. For preparing the victuals for the rest of the crew and for the cabin a European was employed. But on the second day after the pilot was discharged, the captain sent word to the Lascar cook to prepare a dish of rice for his table. It was boiled and served, and those who partook of it appear to have been seized with illness more or less severe. The captain and second mate were disabled from duty, confined to their berths for many days, and exhibited marked symptoms of poisoning. While they were still unable to rise, a Christian Hindoo, who had been shipped as the Jimmy Ducks, came to the captain with news that he had overheard a conversation between the Lascars indicative of an intention to mutiny. He was directed to be vigilant and report instantly any suspicious acts or words. Soon after, a boy communicated the information that a Lascar had offered to secure him 500 rupees if he would mix a certain powder with the coffee intended for the first cabin. Their effects and persons were immediately searched, and on one of them a powder found corresponding to the statement of the boy.

On the fifteenth day after the rice was eaten, the Lascars were ordered to assemble. The captain, who had recovered sufficient strength to move about on deck, and fully satisfied himself of the existence of a conspiracy against the safety of the vessel and lives of its officers, armed himself with pistols, advanced to the group, and asserting that he had been poisoned, exhibited in his hand the paper of powder, and demanded that the criminal should be exposed. It was denied that the powder was poisonous, the Lascar on whom it was seized, asserting that it was cough-medicine. Upon this assertion he was ordered to take a small dose of it himself and complying, proved the falsity of his statement by soon exhibiting the same symptoms which had marked the case of the captain. A rope was speedily prepared, the noose thrown about his neck, and he with others who were subjected to the same process, were exhorted to confess. There was no intention of hanging them, and recourse was had to such an expedient only in hope that the fear of death would elicit information essential to the preservation of the ship. But no such effect was produced, the few words which one of them uttered in broken English being, "Hang and be d——d," or something equivalent.

Three dozen lashes were administered to two or three of the number; and they were then ironed and confined for the remainder of the voyage.

On the arrival of the Josephine at Boston they were immediately given in charge to the United States officers, and a complaint entered against them for attempting to poison the captain. The Grand Jury brought in a true bill, but on coming to trial it was found that no United States Statute covered the case, and they were discharged. The present suit is instituted on their complaint, against the captain for maltreatment. RICHARD H. DANA, Jr., appears in his behalf, [illegible] to assist the case by [illegible]

[illegible] "Yankee sailors" &c., &c., except [illegible] was chargeable [illegible] "Irish and Scotch." The Chief [illegible] words [illegible] At the [illegible] ty was experienced in procuring an interpreter. One of the crew had acted as such at the previous trial, but on this occasion he was a witness for the prosecution, and otherwise unfit. A young man named CHARLES DU CAISSE, who had been born and brought up in India, was at last found, and performed this service to the satisfaction of all parties. The trial is still progressing, and will not, probably, terminate before Thursday. Thus far, nothing seems to have been proved by the prosecution in which the law will not bear out a ship-master. Evidence has indeed been given of certain unjustifiable conduct on the part of the first mate, but I understand that it will be put in evidence that Capt. LEEDHOLM publicly reprimanded that officer in the presence of the entire crew. It has already appeared that he ran away from the vessel shortly after her arrival in port. Difficulty has been experienced in ascertaining the nature of the poisonous powder. It has been subjected to analysis by Dr. JACKSON and others, and pronounced not to be a mineral poison. It bears the appearance of vanilla, and is probably one of those singular Indian poisons which are prepared by pounding to powder dried animal substances, such as the heads of snakes.

The only reflection upon the case which I have to offer is, that it seems hard that a man should have no redress under the United States law for an act which imperiled his life.

The staging which has incumbered State-street so many months, in front of the Merchants' Bank, was removed on Saturday, when the last stone was added to the wall of the new building. This embraces not only the space formerly occupied by the United States Bank edifice, but also the corner lot on Exchange-street, which was purchased by the Merchants' Bank directors during the Summer at more than $75 per square foot. By their charter they are allowed to hold 10 per cent. of their capital ($4,000,000) in real estate. Very nearly this amount they must have expended on the land and construction, but it will prove a remunerative investment, for their estimate of probable receipt from rents, &c., exceeds $35,000, exclusive of the amount with which they will charge themselves for the rooms they occupy. The architecture of the edifice is Grecian. An ingenious use has been made of the two large Quincy granite pillars, which adorned the portico of the United States Bank. They have been fluted, and inserted in the wall of the new building, the contrast of color between them and the other stone employed, which is Concord granite and much lighter, being relieved by the addition of an elaborate ornament to the capital. This, and the large iron building erected by Mr. JOHN C. GRAY, on the site of the Brattle-street Church's former parsonage, which has also been completed since the Summer, are the finest business structures in the city. The proprietors of the Suffolk Bank building, further down State street, have a remodeling of that edifice under consideration. The subdivision of estates is a great check on architectural display in Boston. There are few fronts on State, Washington, Court, Milk, or any other business streets, exceeding fifty feet, and it is rare to meet with any even so long. The proprietors of these narrow contiguous estates seem to have vied with one another in the erection of buildings which should be as markedly diverse as positively ugly. Until they shall become so enlightened as to be willing to make the sacrifice of their whims, and occasionally of slight pecuniary advantage, to adorning the city and gratifying the public eye and pride, the business quarters of Boston can never rival, architecturally, those of other commercial cities of its size and trade—that portion of Hamburg, for example, which has been rebuilt since the great fire. There are various natural features of Boston resembling those of that city, for the proper improvement of which we have there a model to study. The Back Bay, which lies beyond the Public Garden, and between Tremont-road and that portion of the Mill Dam upon which Beacon-street is last extending, might, with the contiguous basin of Charles River, be made similar, and equal in beauty, to the Great and Little Alster at Hamburg. But, returning to our narrow buildings, it is unfortunate that there are no structures nearer than the Old World, by which to illustrate to the public what architectural effects are capable of being produced. An American in Munich or Paris, remembering Broadway as a distance of three thousand miles, on his first trip abroad invariably thinks it equal, architecturally, to the Ludwigs-strasse, or to the Boulevards, or the Rue de la Paix. Remembering them on his return at a similar distance, his belief remains unshaken. It is only by a repetition of his visit, with a critical and minute remembrance for the purposes of comparison, that he is enabled to pass proper judgment on their relative merits.

Accident to the Steamer Kentucky between Pittsburg and Louisville—Three Lives Lost.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

On Saturday night, about 9 o'clock, while the new steamer Kentucky, bound down from Pittsburg, was lying at Smithfield Landing, [illegible] miles above this city, receiving a small quantity of freight, the steam-pipe of the starboard engine broke at the elbow, or above, where the copper joins with the wrought-iron pipe leading out to the boiler. The steam spread all up in the deck rooms, and in fifteen seconds—eleven deck-hands and one deck passenger, who were seated around the [illegible] room stove. The night being cold, all the doors and windows were closed, so that it was almost impossible for the victims to escape. One or two managed to get through the [illegible] and in their fright leaped overboard, but were rescued from drowning by the mate, Mr. [illegible] POM, who lowered the yawl and pulled to them. The immense volume of steam put out the lights in the deck-room. Capt. KNOX and others of the boat, removed the passengers and others to the main cabin, where they were given the kindest attention. Mattresses were spread on the cabin floor, and flour, cotton, oil, &c., applied to the wounded by Dr. M. H. BOYER, a passenger on board. Three of the scalded died on the spot, others were sent to the hospital on the [illegible] boat here. The Silas came down, and took the Kentucky in tow, and brought her down, arriving at 4 A. M. yesterday, and tying up at the Water Works. Several persons were injured, as the steam rushed into the cabin.

A German lad, whose parents reside in Cincinnati, shown this city, where he was [illegible] Tuesday morning. He was going to Magnolia to learn a trade.

An aged colored man, name unknown, a deck passenger, bound for Portsmouth, also died, and another deck passenger, name unknown, also died after he arrived here. All were badly scalded, and it is feared that four or five others will not survive.

The names of the wounded [illegible] are PAT. RYAN, DENNIS RYAN, TOM. DONOVAN, MARAH, ED. MURPHY, HUGH FLANNIGAN, [illegible] RIY, from Maysville; GEO. WASHINGTON, [illegible] JNO. Fire in Baltimore—The Brixton Cotton Manufactory Burned.

From the Sun, Dec. 8.

Yesterday morning, between 1 and 2 o'clock, an alarm of fire was sounded, which was followed by the issuing of flames from a three-story building which was unoccupied, situate on the [illegible] door from Greenwillow. It was entirely [illegible] conflagration, it being the manufactory of [ill

Going into Livery.

The proprietors of one of our large hotels have recently adopted a uniform for the waiters in their employ. All are compelled to wear it or leave the establishment. Some of them rebelled at first, but have finally come to terms, and the entire regiment of waiters now appear in the tailors' and haberdashers' livery. The suit consists of a close fitting drab cloth jacket, mixed pantaloons, and white Marseilles, single-breasted vest with gilt buttons. Whether it is well for all the hotel-keepers, and all the lawyers, and all the office-seekers, to go into livery? Why not?

☞ Glycerine is coming to be one of the institutions. It is but a few years since it first began to be talked about as a very fair thing to drop into a body's ear when afflicted with deafness. But now it is called to the aid of the artist and the skin-specialist very extensively. Some, too, are using it internally as a substitute for cod Liver oil, who report favorably of it. A much more dubious use is injecting it into the bladder for dissecting colonic. The chemists say that it dissolves the vegetable acids, the delinquescent salts, &c., &c., &c. The picklers are trying it on too. They say that for preserving fruit and vegetables, fresh meat and the bodies of small animals, it is unrivaled, covering syrups into the shade and making a fool of alcohol. The present price is presumed to be a matter of fancy, for it can be very cheaply produced—so cheaply indeed that they say it threatens to run whale oil out of the lamps, and give the stove-dealers a great shock. For the present, however, we would prefer our pickles in something else than glycerine, for to the uncultivated taste, and in its usual state of purity, it is a very pretty oil, of a most nauseous odor.

☞ The Philadelphia correspondent of the Boston Medical Journal says that the Jefferson Medical College has an attendance of five or six hundred students, while the University is only about a hundred behind. He says:

"Professor Gross, of the Jefferson, does not seem to fill up fully the gap left by the eminent MUTTER. It is no wonder. The season is so healthy that the students get poor pickings. The wards of the various hospitals are said to be remarkably empty, particularly Blockley. Hence there is some scarcity of anatomical material. At the Pennsylvania Hospital, Dr. Gross gives a medical clinic twice a week. He is a peculiar man, of medium size, spare build and oval head. While lecturing he corrugates his brows into transverse and vertical wrinkles; this takes effect on the circulation in his nose, and makes this organ appear somewhat ruddy. Then his left hand is generally in his breeches' pocket, while the right is performing various elocutionary gestures. Without he is very attentive to interrogatory, and if a student looks at his watch, yawns, or peer out of his room, the Doctor will break off short, it may be in the midst of a sentence, wait in silence until the annoyance has ceased, and then resume the sentence. I don't mention this in disparagement, for I honor the man who has done so much to elevate his profession. His diagnosis is generally made out beautifully, and his prognosis and treatment given clearly, with the reasons."

☞ Dr. EDWARD BROWN-SEQUARD, who has been long known for his researches, experimental and clinical, in physiology and pathology, is delivering in this City, at two of the medical colleges, a course of lectures upon the Diseases of the Nervous System and the latest fashion—of the sugra-renal capsules. We take it they are the same lectures he has been delivering in Boston to the great edification of the faculty.

☞ At Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore we hear of a want of dissecting material. This is always a difficulty in the provincial towns. There is no trouble of the sort in New-York.

The Board of Aldermen.

CENTRAL PARK—MESSAGE FROM THE MAYOR.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, ISAAC O. BARNUM, President, in the Chair.

THE ROOSEVELT-STREET FERRY.

Two communications were received relative to the Roosevelt-street Ferry. The first one read was signed by a large number of citizens, who set forth that the establishment of the Ferry had caused many persons to purchase property, and erect manufactories in its vicinity; that the Ferry could be made to pay; and that the Union Ferry Company refused to sell their boats and property in that Ferry at anything less than an exorbitant price. They prayed that the Common Council would not release the Union Ferry Company from their obligation to operate the Ferry. The other communication was signed by owners and occupants of property in the City of New-York and Brooklyn who desire their ferry accommodation from the Roosevelt-street Ferry, who represent "That the Union Ferry Company having presented a petition to your honorable body, to be released from their obligation to carry out the Roosevelt-street Ferry, on the ground that it is an unprofitable establishment; and the subscribers, believing the grounds of such application to be untrue, and that great public inconvenience and much private wrong would result from the discontinuance of said ferry, are ready and willing to purchase it with its boats and appurtenances, at a fair valuation. They therefore remonstrate against granting such application on the part of the Union Ferry Company, and pray that it may be rejected."

The petition is signed by John H. Smith; Curtis, Mitchell & Co.; Westlake & McKee; Samuel G. Baxter and a number of others.

The communications were referred to the Committee on Ferries.

THE QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Alderman CRANDY rose to a question of privilege. He noticed that at the previous meeting of the Board the matter of cleaning the streets of the City by contract had been taken up and passed. He was absent on that occasion in consequence of a death in his family; and from the interest he had exhibited in that question, he had hoped that the matter would not have been acted upon when he was not present. He desired to record his vote against the proposition, and asked that he might have that privilege. It was granted. He also wished to record his vote against non-concurring with the Board of Councilmen in the matter of the Metropolitan Gas Company. His name was recorded in accordance with his desire.

THE OPHTHALMIC HOSPITAL.

The report of the Finance Committee, concurring to donate $500 to the New-York Ophthalmic Hospital, was presented and laid on the table.

THE COMMISSIONERS OF DEEDS VETO.

The Report of the Committee on Law, relative to the Mayor's Veto of the resolution appointing Commissioners of Deeds, was adopted. It says the Committee have no doubt that the persons appointed will demand to be sworn into office, and on the refusal of the County Clerk so to do, will, by a writ of mandamus, compel him to show cause before a Supreme Court Judge, who would, your Committee believe, take the same views they have taken in their Report. They view as that the authority to appoint Commissioners of Deeds is derived from the Legislature, who by an act passed in 1845, authorized and directed (see Session Laws, ch. 75, sec. 4,) in the following words: "Commissioners of Deeds in the cities of this State shall be appointed by the Common Councils of said cities respectively, and all vacancies occurring during the term for which any Commissioner shall be appointed shall be filled in like manner." Again, the Charter of 1830 says, "Neither the Mayor nor Recorder of the City of New-York shall be a member of the Common Council thereof after the second Tuesday of May, 1831." The Committee claim that the appointment of Commissioners of Deeds is not a legislative but an executive act, and that the Mayor has no power in such case.

THE GRADE OF FRANKLIN-SQUARE.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Street Commissioner report to this Board (if satisfactory, by what proceedings and under what authority the grade of Franklin-square, Pearl-street, Hague-street and Franklin-street has been changed.

SALARY RAISED.

The Board concurred to raise the salary of the Fire Warden Clerk, from $600 to $800 per annum, to date from January, 1856.

STEAM FIRE-ENGINES.

A report was received from the Board of Councilmen, for concurrence, proposing to purchase two steam fire-engines, at a cost of $6,500 each.

Alderman CRANDY opposed it vehemently. He declared that he had seen them try three hours, in front of his house, and there they could raise steam enough to throw water against the first story windows.

Alderman TOOKER contended, as the insurance companies would receive the greatest benefit, they [illegible]

[illegible] Alderman BARNUM moved that the subject be referred to the Committee on Streets, as that was an honest and intelligent Committee.

It was referred to the Committee on Fire Department. The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

CENTRAL PARK—THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

The following Message was received from His Honor the Mayor, but it had not been reached when the Board adjourned:

OFFICE OF THE CENTRAL PARK COMMISSIONERS, } NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Dec. 10.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN: In reply to the resolutions of your Board, calling upon the Commissioners of the Central Park for information concerning their expenditures and affairs up to the 1st of December inst., the Commissioners have the honor to report:

That, according to the provisions of the ordinance approved Nov. 21, 1856, for the regulation and government of the Central Park, they are required to make a detailed statement of everything appertaining to their proceedings, in the months of January and July in each year, and that they have in preparation a full statement, to be sent in accordingly next month.

The Commissioners, however, take great pleasure in stating at this time that they have made far greater progress with the preparatory arrangements towards the actual improvement of the Park, than was to have been expected, considering the extraordinary opposition shown to the work by those whose duty it was to aid in the execution of the law.

Immediately after the passage of the Ordinance, the undersigned appointed and organized the necessary clerical force for the transaction of business at two offices, located at the junction of Broadway and Fifty-ninth-street, on the Park grounds, and at the corner of Broadway and Chambers-street. The necessary force for the protection of the trees, shrubbery, buildings and movable property on the Park were also appointed and placed on duty.

When thus provided with officers and assistants the Commissioners proceeded to take an inventory of the buildings on the ground and to let them to the best advantage—the proceeds being collected by the Collector of the City Revenue and paid into the Treasury.

The following gentlemen were invited to form a Consulting Board, to advise as to the plan of the Park-improvement, viz.: Hon. WASHINGTON IRVING, Hon. GEORGE BANCROFT, Hon. JAMES E. COOLEY, JAMES PHALEN, Esq.; CHAS. F. BRIGGS, Esq.; JAMES LENNOX, Esq.; and STUART BROWN, Esq. This Board promptly responded to the invitation, and, after several meetings and due deliberation, decided upon the general features of a plan, to which the Commissioners gave concurrence.

Having thus progressed far enough to require the services of engineers and surveyors, these officers were accordingly appointed, and have been continually on duty since. For a more full statement of the proceedings of this corps, the Commissioners refer to the annexed reports of E. L. VIELE, Esq., the Engineer-in-Chief, marked A; and, for an account of the duties performed by the Clerks in the lower office, to the report of JEREMIAH TOWLE, Esq., Chief Clerk, marked B.

The Commissioners are also called upon, in the resolution, to give a detailed statement of their expenditures, to which they regret to reply that they have not expended a single dollar—that, although the force employed are, in most cases, men in destitute circumstances, without any means of support, and with families dependent upon them, not a dollar has been paid to them by the City, for the valuable services they have rendered.

It is true that the ordinance creating the Central Park Commissioners provides for the payment of these people by declaring as follows:

"SEC. 6. The proceeds of buildings, improvements or materials sold, and the rent of buildings and land let or hereinafter authorized, are hereby appropriated for the purpose of this ordinance to be disbursed by the Comptroller upon the requisition of the Commissioners."

And it is true that $8,546 have been derived from these sources and paid into the Treasury, but the Comptroller has refused to respond to the requisition of the Commissioners to draw a dollar of it for this purpose, assuming that these rents are pledged to the Sinking Fund and cannot be diverted to any other purpose.

The Commissioners finding themselves thus embarrassed, made application to the Board of Supervisors to add to the tax bill for the current year a sum which would not only cover the accruing expenditures, but provide for the large outlays of the coming year, if the Park is to be improved according to the object of its design. This they sought to do in a manner entirely legal and justifiable, but were again foiled by technical objections. It seemed as if the old enemies of the Central Park, whom it had been supposed were crushed out by the spirited liberality and progress which had commenced and thus far carried through this magnificent City enterprise, were again in the ascendancy and determined to prevent its consummation, even at this late day.

The Commissioners, however, were not deterred by these adverse circumstances. They have progressed as fast and as far as it was prudent to proceed; not doubting that the public, who have so consistently stood firm in its behalf, would not desert it now.

Annexed, marked C, is a statement of the liabilities incurred to the 31st of December; the salaries being nominally stated, inasmuch as the Ordinance provides that they shall be fixed by the Common Council.

It is worthy of notice in this communication that the aggregate sum of these liabilities amount to but $29,586 47, though it has been recently stated that the Commissioners of the Central Park had asked that over $300,000 be put in the budget to pay expenses incurred. This amount was asked to be placed in the budget by the Central Park Commissioners, not only to cover the expenses incurred, but also the sum required for the contemplated expenditures for improvements during the year 1857—being the estimates of the Engineer in Chief.

The Commissioners have not relaxed their determination to carry out the duties imposed upon them by the Ordinance under which they act.

They are conscious of the great importance of this work to the City, and fully satisfied that for every dollar of expenditure required, five will be returned in the increased wealth which must flow from its completion and use. The extent and greatness of this City is derived principally from its commerce, foreign and domestic, which, to be retained and increased, commensurate City improvements must be provided. To add to the inducements for increased population, we must make it desirable as a place of residence and resort. If to our magnificent bay, beautiful landscapes, noble rivers and Croton Waterworks were added to the Central Park and a great University, New-York in a few years would become the leading City of the world, and its property quadrupled in value. The spirit of the age, and especially of the American character is progress, and let the public authorities of New-York, imitating the enterprise of its citizens, endeavor to impart to their own acts a more enlarged and liberal conception of City improvements.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor,
JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Street Commissioner,
Commissioners of the Central Park.

CENTRAL PARK, OFFICE OF ENGINEER IN CHIEF, NEW-YORK, Dec. 8, 1856.

To the Hon. Fernando Wood, and Joseph S. Taylor, Esq., Commissioners of Central Park:

GENTLEMEN—I have the honor to submit, in accordance with your instructions, the following Report of the operations under my direction, connected with the improvement of the Central Park:

The field work, which was commenced on the 12th June, has been prosecuted without intermission to the present date. To insure an early completion of the preliminary surveys, and also greater accuracy of detail, the area included within the limits of the Park has been divided into four divisions, and each of the divisions placed in charge of one of the Surveyors appointed by the Commissioners. The party of each Surveyor consists of a first and second assistant and an axeman.

The duties of the Surveyors and the work accomplished has been:

1. The survey and accurate location of the exterior line of the Park, and the determination of its grade with reference to the present grades of the bounding avenues and streets, and the grades established by law; profiles and sections of which have been drawn, and minutely detailed estimates based thereon, both for a permanent and for a temporary inclosure.

2. The instrumental sub-division into sections of each of the divisions, and the further division of these sections into rectangular areas of sufficiently small extent to insure the minute delineation of the topography, substantially marking each angle of the small areas and determining the altitudes of these points for the foundation of contour lines—referring the whole to a common place of reference, and tracing in the contour lines.

3. Surveys for the purposes of drainage of all the water courses which have their origin within—or intersect the area of the Park—tracing them to their termination, either at the East River or to the sewers into which they empty.

4. Surveying and furnishing profiles for geological examinations.

5. Marking out the lines of certain roads now ready to be opened.

6. Certain geological and botanical examinations, the results and details of which it is presumed are not at this time required.

It is proper to state that although none of the persons employed as above, have thus far received any compensation for their services, they have devoted themselves to their duties with an earnestness and zeal, which, under more favorable circumstances, would have accomplished the improvement of no inconsiderable portion of the Park; as it is, the work which has been done, forms a basis for the immediate commencement of every improvement, either by contract or otherwise.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
EGBERT L. VIELE,
Engineer in Chief.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE CENTRAL PARK, No. 571 Broadway, NEW-YORK, Dec. 8, 1856.

To the Hon. the Commissioners of the Central Park:

GENTLEMEN: Since the establishment of this Office it has been the source through which the public have looked for information in all matters concerning the Central Park, not only in laying out and improving the grounds, but in the adjustment of the awards and assessments on the property with disputed titles.

A large amount of this property was necessarily assessed to unknown owners, and the awards and assessments made for blocks and parcels as laid down [illegible]

[illegible] Alderman BARNUM moved that the subject be referred to the Committee on Streets, as that was an honest and intelligent Committee.

It was referred to the Committee on Fire Department. The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

CENTRAL PARK—THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

The following Message was received from His Honor the Mayor, but it had not been reached when the Board adjourned:

OFFICE OF THE CENTRAL PARK COMMISSIONERS, } NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Dec. 10.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN: In reply to the resolutions of your Board, calling upon the Commissioners of the Central Park for information concerning their expenditures and affairs up to the 1st of December inst., the Commissioners have the honor to report:

That, according to the provisions of the ordinance approved Nov. 21, 1856, for the regulation and government of the Central Park, they are required to make a detailed statement of everything appertaining to their proceedings, in the months of January and July in each year, and that they have in preparation a full statement, to be sent in accordingly next month.

The Commissioners, however, take great pleasure in stating at this time that they have made far greater progress with the preparatory arrangements towards the actual improvement of the Park, than was to have been expected, considering the extraordinary opposition shown to the work by those whose duty it was to aid in the execution of the law.

Immediately after the passage of the Ordinance, the undersigned appointed and organized the necessary clerical force for the transaction of business at two offices, located at the junction of Broadway and Fifty-ninth-street, on the Park grounds, and at the corner of Broadway and Chambers-street. The necessary force for the protection of the trees, shrubbery, buildings and movable property on the Park were also appointed and placed on duty.

When thus provided with officers and assistants the Commissioners proceeded to take an inventory of the buildings on the ground and to let them to the best advantage—the proceeds being collected by the Collector of the City Revenue and paid into the Treasury.

The following gentlemen were invited to form a Consulting Board, to advise as to the plan of the Park-improvement, viz.: Hon. WASHINGTON IRVING, Hon. GEORGE BANCROFT, Hon. JAMES E. COOLEY, JAMES PHALEN, Esq.; CHAS. F. BRIGGS, Esq.; JAMES LENNOX, Esq.; and STUART BROWN, Esq. This Board promptly responded to the invitation, and, after several meetings and due deliberation, decided upon the general features of a plan, to which the Commissioners gave concurrence.

Having thus progressed far enough to require the services of engineers and surveyors, these officers were accordingly appointed, and have been continually on duty since. For a more full statement of the proceedings of this corps, the Commissioners refer to the annexed reports of E. L. VIELE, Esq., the Engineer-in-Chief, marked A; and, for an account of the duties performed by the Clerks in the lower office, to the report of JEREMIAH TOWLE, Esq., Chief Clerk, marked B.

The Commissioners are also called upon, in the resolution, to give a detailed statement of their expenditures, to which they regret to reply that they have not expended a single dollar—that, although the force employed are, in most cases, men in destitute circumstances, without any means of support, and with families dependent upon them, not a dollar has been paid to them by the City, for the valuable services they have rendered.

It is true that the ordinance creating the Central Park Commissioners provides for the payment of these people by declaring as follows:

"SEC. 6. The proceeds of buildings, improvements or materials sold, and the rent of buildings and land let or hereinafter authorized, are hereby appropriated for the purpose of this ordinance to be disbursed by the Comptroller upon the requisition of the Commissioners."

And it is true that $8,546 have been derived from these sources and paid into the Treasury, but the Comptroller has refused to respond to the requisition of the Commissioners to draw a dollar of it for this purpose, assuming that these rents are pledged to the Sinking Fund and cannot be diverted to any other purpose.

The Commissioners finding themselves thus embarrassed, made application to the Board of Supervisors to add to the tax bill for the current year a sum which would not only cover the accruing expenditures, but provide for the large outlays of the coming year, if the Park is to be improved according to the object of its design. This they sought to do in a manner entirely legal and justifiable, but were again foiled by technical objections. It seemed as if the old enemies of the Central Park, whom it had been supposed were crushed out by the spirited liberality and progress which had commenced and thus far carried through this magnificent City enterprise, were again in the ascendancy and determined to prevent its consummation, even at this late day.

The Commissioners, however, were not deterred by these adverse circumstances. They have progressed as fast and as far as it was prudent to proceed; not doubting that the public, who have so consistently stood firm in its behalf, would not desert it now.

Annexed, marked C, is a statement of the liabilities incurred to the 31st of December; the salaries being nominally stated, inasmuch as the Ordinance provides that they shall be fixed by the Common Council.

It is worthy of notice in this communication that the aggregate sum of these liabilities amount to but $29,586 47, though it has been recently stated that the Commissioners of the Central Park had asked that over $300,000 be put in the budget to pay expenses incurred. This amount was asked to be placed in the budget by the Central Park Commissioners, not only to cover the expenses incurred, but also the sum required for the contemplated expenditures for improvements during the year 1857—being the estimates of the Engineer in Chief.

The Commissioners have not relaxed their determination to carry out the duties imposed upon them by the Ordinance under which they act.

They are conscious of the great importance of this work to the City, and fully satisfied that for every dollar of expenditure required, five will be returned in the increased wealth which must flow from its completion and use. The extent and greatness of this City is derived principally from its commerce, foreign and domestic, which, to be retained and increased, commensurate City improvements must be provided. To add to the inducements for increased population, we must make it desirable as a place of residence and resort. If to our magnificent bay, beautiful landscapes, noble rivers and Croton Waterworks were added to the Central Park and a great University, New-York in a few years would become the leading City of the world, and its property quadrupled in value. The spirit of the age, and especially of the American character is progress, and let the public authorities of New-York, imitating the enterprise of its citizens, endeavor to impart to their own acts a more enlarged and liberal conception of City improvements.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor,
JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Street Commissioner,
Commissioners of the Central Park.

CENTRAL PARK, OFFICE OF ENGINEER IN CHIEF, NEW-YORK, Dec. 8, 1856.

To the Hon. Fernando Wood, and Joseph S. Taylor, Esq., Commissioners of Central Park:

GENTLEMEN—I have the honor to submit, in accordance with your instructions, the following Report of the operations under my direction, connected with the improvement of the Central Park:

The field work, which was commenced on the 12th June, has been prosecuted without intermission to the present date. To insure an early completion of the preliminary surveys, and also greater accuracy of detail, the area included within the limits of the Park has been divided into four divisions, and each of the divisions placed in charge of one of the Surveyors appointed by the Commissioners. The party of each Surveyor consists of a first and second assistant and an axeman.

The duties of the Surveyors and the work accomplished has been:

1. The survey and accurate location of the exterior line of the Park, and the determination of its grade with reference to the present grades of the bounding avenues and streets, and the grades established by law; profiles and sections of which have been drawn, and minutely detailed estimates based thereon, both for a permanent and for a temporary inclosure.

2. The instrumental sub-division into sections of each of the divisions, and the further division of these sections into rectangular areas of sufficiently small extent to insure the minute delineation of the topography, substantially marking each angle of the small areas and determining the altitudes of these points for the foundation of contour lines—referring the whole to a common place of reference, and tracing in the contour lines.

3. Surveys for the purposes of drainage of all the water courses which have their origin within—or intersect the area of the Park—tracing them to their termination, either at the East River or to the sewers into which they empty.

4. Surveying and furnishing profiles for geological examinations.

5. Marking out the lines of certain roads now ready to be opened.

6. Certain geological and botanical examinations, the results and details of which it is presumed are not at this time required.

It is proper to state that although none of the persons employed as above, have thus far received any compensation for their services, they have devoted themselves to their duties with an earnestness and zeal, which, under more favorable circumstances, would have accomplished the improvement of no inconsiderable portion of the Park; as it is, the work which has been done, forms a basis for the immediate commencement of every improvement, either by contract or otherwise.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
EGBERT L. VIELE,
Engineer in Chief.

Continuation of the Wills and Conley Trial—Testimony for the Defense.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—Dec. 11.

Before Hon. Judge Capron.

THIRD DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The Court was crowded during the whole of yesterday by citizens anxious to listen to the important trial of Wills and Conley, for receiving $7,000 worth of stolen goods. Very seldom has a trial on such a charge created equal excitement.

Before the investigation was resumed Lewis Ahrens, a respectable-looking young German, charged with issuing large quantities of counterfeit money, knowing it to be counterfeit, pleaded guilty to forgery in the second degree, and was sentenced to 5 years and 4 months in the State Prison.

The Wills and Conley trial was then resumed.

EVIDENCE FOR DEFENCE.

Daniel Parish, examined by Mr. Graham.—I reside at Fort Lee; I have property there and here also; I am a lawyer; I know Charles Wills; I have known him since October, 1855; I had business with him in January last; it was to pay them $152; this business grew out of a transaction in October; I was at the office of Wills and Conley on the 18th and 19th of January; I cannot fix the particular hour that I went there on the 18th; my conviction is that I went as soon as I got my breakfast; I am not an early riser; my conviction is that it was between 10 and 12 o'clock; I have no doubt in my own mind that I went to their office between those hours; I do not remember how long I waited; I had the cash to count out and pay, and to get back my papers; Mr. Wills was at his desk, so was Mr. Conley; Wills and Conley both went with me to a Commissioner of Deeds in Barclay-street; my conviction is that I was about an hour at their office; I cannot swear that I returned to the office that day.

Cross-examined by the Assistant District-Attorney.—I sometimes stop at the Dey-street House and sometimes at Lovejoy's; I cannot say where I was stopping on the 18th January; I had been in New-York two or three days before the 18th; I went on the 16th to Paige's Hotel; I cannot say where I was on the 17th; my name is on the books at Lovejoy's Hotel on the 18th January; I do not know where I stopped on the 17th; my conviction is that I stopped at the Dey-street House; I cannot swear that I was not at Wills' office before ten o'clock on the 18th; my conviction is that it was between ten and twelve.

This witness was very vague in all his answers, and seemed unwilling to swear to nearly every question put to him, but fell back upon his "conviction."

Augustus W. Mosder, examined by Mr. Graham.—I am a dentist; my place of business is at No. 333 Broadway, next to the rooms occupied by Wills and Conley; I have known them since they opened their office there; in the second week of January last, I was using their scales to weigh gold; one morning while I was there, a man came in, and showed Wills some samples of goods; he said that he wished to raise $2,000 on them; Wills asked him to leave the samples, and call again in the afternoon; the goods consisted of bosoms, collars, and dark veils; they were in a paper box; the man produced a list of the articles, and mentioned how many he had; I have seen Mr. Wills and Mr. Emberson together on the Eighth-avenue; I don't know at what time it was, but I know it was pleasant weather; I think it was in the Spring; I was with Wills and a friend of his; it was between 9 and 10 at night; Emberson met us; there was some conversation between them; Emberson took Wills aside.

Mr. Graham proposed to show by this witness that Emberson had sought Wills for the purpose of getting the matter settled without bringing it to a trial, and that Wills said he would not give three cents to settle it, for he wished the case to be fully investigated. As it was not shown, however, that Wills' remark had reference to the case before the Court, his Honor Judge CAPRON excluded that testimony. A long argument was the consequence, in which the Court coincided in opinion with the Assistant District-Attorney that the evidence could not be admitted. Mr. Graham took an exception to the ruling.

Examination resumed.—Wills, Emberson and myself took drinks; Wills and Emberson did not talk long together; I have been into Wills' office, sometimes two or three times a week, sometimes only once in two weeks; in the inner room of their office I never noticed a lock to the door; the fastening was a hook and a staple; I have fastened it myself; I am certain that such was the fastening; the partition in their office is a wooden frame, with canvas on one side, and paper on the other; it did not reach to the ceiling; I could just touch the top of the partition with my hand.

Cross-examined by the Assistant District-Attorney.—I manufacture false teeth; I use a great deal of gold in the manufacture of teeth in the course of the year; I never bought gold of Wills & Conley; I do not know whether they were partners in business; it is very little that Mr. Conley has been there; I have been in the back room to lounge, and to smoke, and to read the papers; sometimes I had a lady friend call to see me, and I would want the room; on such occasions I used to fasten the door; there was no lock on the door that I can swear to; I could see the place where the lock was, but the door seemed to have been painted over since the lock was taken off; there is no knob of the door; I do not think I ever saw a knob there; I forget when I borrowed the room of Wills first; I do not know the day of the week when the man came into the office with the samples; I am positive it was about the second week in January, and I think it was somewhere about the middle of the week; I guess it was shortly after nine o'clock; I did not notice anything about his dress or face; I think he wore a beard; he was a stout man; he carried the parcel under his arm; Mr. Wills was sitting at his desk; I was weighing gold; I moved back when the man came in; he stayed about ten minutes; I overheard all that he said while he was there; the goods were embroidered collars, and the laces were embroidered; there were some baby waists; I thought they were pretty fine goods; they were of different sizes; the veils were black; my curiosity prompted me to step up and look them over; I cannot swear that I ever saw Emberson in Wills' office; the name of the party who was with me and Mr. Wills in the Eighth-avenue was Goodwin; Emberson was accompanied by another man; I do not know which of us spoke first; I did not see Wills beckon to Emberson; I do not remember whether we were standing on the corner or walking when we first saw Emberson; I was not trying to listen to what Emberson and Wills said to each other; I used to go into the room often; I fastened the door when the lady was with me; I used to put a piece of paper before the holes in the door, where the lock had been taken off.

To Mr. Graham.—They want to show that you went into that room with a lady, for an improper purpose. Did you do so?

Witness.—Well, I won't say whether I did or not. [Laughter.]

John Pinkus, examined by Mr. Graham.—I know Wills and Conley; I was in their office on the 10th or 11th of January; it was between nine and ten o'clock in the morning; I saw on their counter some samples of goods; Mr. Wills showed them to me; there were some collars, and veils, and ladies' chemises; I was no judge of their value; Emberson never said to me that he had stolen goods taken from him three times; he said he had stolen goods taken from him once.

Cross-examined by the Assistant District-Attorney.—I am no judge of lace goods; nobody was in the office besides Wills, when he showed me the samples; Wills opened the parcel and showed its contents; my attention was never called to the fact that I saw these samples, with a view to my testimony in this Court; people have spoken to me about the samples.

Direct Examination.—I have effected loans for Mr. Wills; on one occasion I sent a gentleman to get a loan from him for dress-goods; I have been in their office and seen people come in and ask for loans upon watches.

To the Assistant District-Attorney.—I do not know whether Wills and Conley were partners; I did not often see Conley in the office.

Emil Schöning, examined by Mr. Graham.—I am a druggist; I carry on business at No. 175 Second-street and No. 140 Eighth-avenue; I have seen Emberson; the only time I ever saw him before yesterday in this Court was with Mr. Wills; I do not recollect the day; it might be eight or ten months; I do not remember whether it was in March; I saw him in Wills' office; I heard Wills and Emberson converse in relation to certain property; I understood that Wills asked Emberson if he acted as his agent; Emberson said "Yes;" that is all that I know; a gentleman coming in from a side door heard the same; Emberson said to Wills there should be no trouble about the things they were talking about; I heard Emberson say something about coming to Court, and I understood him to say he would do nothing.

Cross-examined by the Assistant District-Attorney.—Wills had notes of Kinsley and Darling who had failed, and I went to Wills' office about them; Wills had advanced money on the notes six months before; Mr. Darling asked me to go and buy the notes for one hundred dollars.

To Mr. Graham.—I recognise Mr. Nagle as the man who came out of the side room.

To the Assistant District-Attorney.—I suppose Wills said to Emberson, "Did I act as your agent?" Emberson said, "Yes, all right;" and I understood Emberson to say that he had nothing against Mr. Wills.

The examination of this witness being concluded, the Court adjourned to this day. The case, it is expected, will not be finished until Saturday.

LONG ISLAND.

New Ground in Wallabout Bay.

A contract has lately been made by the United States Government with Messrs. Burns & Co., for the filling in of a portion of the low ground lying east of the Navy-Yard; a portion of which, to the extent of 6¾ acres, will be occupied by the Marine barracks. The contract calls for the deposit of 250,000 cubic yards of earth, and the work is required to be done as fast as ordered by the Government. The materials used in filling it will be supplied from different sources—chiefly from the banks of earth removed in the suburbs of Brooklyn, in the process of laying out new streets. The Government now owns the whole of the marshy ground between the eastern and western districts of Brooklyn, with the exception of Clinton and Vanderbilt avenues—the former already graded and in use.

The authorities of Brooklyn are negotiating with the Government for the privilege of relinquishing that part of Vanderbilt-avenue, passing through the low ground to the water, and procuring the right of way for another street instead—probably an extension of Washington-avenue, between Clinton-avenue and the Naval Hospital. As this will result to the advantage of the Navy-Yard property, there is little doubt the arrangement will be consummated. The filling-in for the site of the Marine barracks will require about 150,000 cubic yards of earth, and the work will now go forward rapidly. The contract price is something less than $1 per yard.

River-street Canal.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Dec. 10, 1856.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

A communication and comment thereon in the TIMES of yesterday, regarding the Wallabout Bay and Newtown Creek Canal, suggests the propriety of answering at once many queries regarding that improvement. To myself, as the engineer, was confided the route and location of the Canal. It was necessary first for the Legislature to authorize the formal opening of a street 150 feet wide. If one of the already improved streets of Williamsburg was adopted two plans were open—to widen a 60 feet street on each side 45 feet, and thus destroy two lines of houses and lots, and pass between the ropewalks of Messrs. WALE & LAWRENCE—or to widen only on one side, and thus require the payment of damages for only one line of houses and lots. I adopted the latter route in the plan submitted to the Legislature, and by selecting Marshall instead of Moore-street, obtained a channel with much less average cutting. By the latter plan, however, the loss of the two walks will be removed, but at much less cost than half a mile of houses and lots.

The real cause of delay is that River-street, which is to contain the Canal, must be opened like other city streets—by obtaining the signatures of a majority of the owners. When this is done your correspondent will see the work rapidly progressing.

Alderman Meeker Back Again.

The Democracy of Brooklyn were in ecstasies yesterday. The long-absent Mr. MEEKER, elected to Aldermanic honors in the Seventh ward, returned to the city—did not like the West nor the people—but did like Brooklyn, Aldermanic honors, and so returned to them like a sensible man. He was cordially greeted by his constituents and a large number of office-seekers. The Democrats now expect to carry everything before them. One-half the Board of Aldermen are politically, and one or two hired for the emergency, they will succeed, if united, in satisfying some of the unterrified.

Legislative Appropriations in aid of Kansas—Governor Reeder's Views.

WASHINGTON CITY, Friday, Dec. 5, 1856.

Hon. M. F. CONWAY—Dear Sir: I am truly gratified at the legislative appropriation for Kansas which has been against them, we have a comparatively easy task. We have only to show the most accurate view, again, we will do so very soon, of the home government, in supplying newspapers with daily information of affairs on the Island, the necessities of internal tranquillity or external defence, and, in a general way, warding off any more decided type of annexation than that afforded by the wires and battery. Every influence and interest seems, indeed, to favor our New-York projectors. The extension of their magnetic nerves to the other islands of the Western Indies, and to terra firma, is a mere question of time.

Stock Gambling.

JACOB LITTLE's third failure, as it is styled, renews the discussion about stock-jobbing which his first and second successively caused. It will probably end in the same way. The newspapers will canvass the morality of the general business,—people in the street will wonder at the boldness of his operations,—and in about five days the whole thing will have become an old story. Meantime Mr. LITTLE, having repudiated all his contracts, which as they were illegal he had the right to do at any time, will resume his seat at the Board of Brokers, renew his bold and splendid career, and prepare for another failure.

There are two kinds of business in which brokers engage. One consists in making purchases and sales for other people, who have not the time or the knowledge to do it for themselves, and who prefer paying some skillful professional person a commission, or a fee, for doing it on their behalf. This is an honest, legitimate, and highly useful calling. The other is, simply, gambling—betting on the future price of stocks, or of flour, or of any other article, just as horse-jockeys bet on the speed of horses, and taking, substantially, the same means to win, namely, poisoning or laming your opponent's nag, or bribing his rider.

JACOB LITTLE was a gambler in stocks. He generally selected the leading Railroad stocks of the country to bet upon, and he always bet that, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, they were substantially worthless. The way he got at it was to agree, at the end of twenty, thirty, sixty or ninety days, to deliver them at a price far below their apparent value. Having made his bet, his next endeavor was to win it. He must manage in some way to break down the public impression that the stocks had any value at all. To bring this about he must first seem to believe it himself, and show that belief by betting still more largely, just as a gambler in politics makes a large bet to back a small one. So he would go on day after day, offering stock upon stock at the lowest prices, and the natural effect would be to lead outsiders to believe that the stock was worthless, else it would not be sold so low.

But other tricks must aid the game. Panics in the money market are always of service, and a newspaper is always useful in manufacturing a panic. Mr. LITTLE, and the class of Brokers who gambled in his wake, accordingly secured the Herald, which, as it lives upon panics, had a taste for the service and was easily retained. Its money column was always open to these men—indeed was often filled with matter written at their dictation. When he happened to be betting especially high, the columns of the Herald would contain a flaming announcement that the whole country was just upon the brink of ruin—that awful explosions were at hand—that railroad dividends were all made from borrowed money—and that the world generally was on the eve of a universal crash. Sometimes the failure of a bank, or the scoundrelism of a railroad officer or a bank cashier, would afford the occasion for these horrid outcries, and give them a kind of plausibility to the public ear. Often they were sheer fabrications,—falsehoods manufactured out of whole cloth, like the Herald's announcement of immense defalcations in several of the City Banks a year or two ago,—for which there was not the shadow of foundation, and which were put forth for the sole and exclusive purpose of creating a panic, alarming all bona fide buyers of stock, depressing their price, and thus—enabling JACOB LITTLE and his tribe to win their bets. Precisely this game has been played over and over again. Men of sense see through it, but, unfortunately, neither the stock market, nor the Herald, rely upon men of sense; there are plenty of fools to be duped by the knaves who operate in both:—and so the end is accomplished. Prices are knocked down for a day or two:—JACOB wins his bets—pockets the profits, and prepares a new scheme of operations for the next day.

So he has gone on for months and years—until his bets amounted to millions, embracing all the leading Railroad Stocks of the country. Of course his system of operations, his bold betting, his circulation of false rumors, his creation of panics, his incessant accusations through the Herald of fraud and rottenness, backed by suppressions or falsifications of official facts and figures, for a long time accomplished his object, kept the prices of all these stocks far below their real value, harassed and impoverished the widows and orphans who owned them, and put the large profits of the unprincipled game into his own pocket.

But fraud and delusion, however bold, cannot last always. The public mind has its periodical fits of sanity. A pressure of this sort, kept up for a year or two, is uniformly followed by a reaction. Facts and figures become too strong even for the most gigantic exclamation points, and the panics of the Herald are seen through. Prices won't go down at JACOB's bidding. Stocks stand obstinately at something nearer their real value than suits his purposes. He can't buy them as low as he has agreed to sell them. Consequently, the profits promise to go out of his pocket, instead of coming in. Whereupon he walks coolly into the Board amongst the men he has been betting with, and tells them he can't fulfill his stipulations. As the law ignores such contracts and refuses to enforce them, he has everything in his own hands. Those who have been betting with him must accept whatever terms he sees fit to offer. So he has no difficulty in "making an arrangement with his creditors," backs out of all his bad bets, and proceeds forthwith to organize the programme of a new campaign.

This is the plain English of JACOB LITTLE's "failure." It is the failure of a stock gambler—of a man who bets on the prices of other people's property—who pockets whatever he makes and repudiates what he loses, when his losses become heavy enough to make it an object to put out a fire when there is notoriously a conflagration of money. It is the failure of the Bear party to frighten the public into the belief that the whole foundations of society are about giving way; that every man is a responsible post to a knave; that the barrenets will fall, railroads be ruined, canals prove unproductive, and banks become bankrupt. Some of the most disastrous turns in commercial affairs have been brought about by the persistent croaking of the Bear party operating upon the fears of people of weak nerves. In this country the Croakers are always defeated in the long run, because the condition of affairs is, in the main, sound and prosperous, and the reverses are the effect of accidental causes. It is only necessary to look at the constant rise in the valuation of property during the past half century—at the immense developments of the natural resources of the country, and the general condition of the people—to become satisfied of the unphilosophical conclusions, and the destructive influences of the Croakers; and that, though they may now and then make a "ten strike" out of the calamities of the public, they must, in the long run, be the losing party. The men of wealth among us belong, almost without an exception, to the "Bull" party.

KEPT BY A BEAR.—It has been notorious for several years past that the Herald has been in the keeping of a great Bear in Wall-street; and by way of antithesis it asserted yesterday that the DAILY TIMES was in the keeping of a Bull party in the same street. We might easily deny the soft imputation, if we had a suspicion that anybody would be likely to believe it; but the moral that points the tale of the Herald is so complimentary to ourselves that we are half tempted to appropriate it. According to the Herald the Bear that has kept that paper has failed three times within a very few years, while the opposing Bull who kept the TIMES has not failed at all, but been eminently successful in his operations. This is the only moral that adorns the Herald's story, and it is quite welcome to proclaim it every morning if it can find any profit or amusement in attempting to prove how much more influential the DAILY TIMES is in Wall-street circles, than itself. As the Herald's announcement may cause the Bears to be looking towards our concern of Nassau-street, we may as well mention that no Bear parties need apply for aid in this quarter.

A NORTHERN DISUNIONIST.—The Charleston Mercury publishes a letter from Brookeville, Penn., in which the writer gives his full assent to the idea of the Mercury and other Southern journals, that a dissolution of the Union has become absolutely necessary. He bases his opinion upon these three points,—first, that the interests of free labor in the North and of slave labor in the South, never can be harmonized upon a national basis;—second, that the North must always hold the position of hostility towards Slavery, and third, that the North never can be educated or reconciled to its nationality and extension. Under this state of things he believes a division of the Union absolutely essential to the harmony of the country.

In support of his assertion that the North is irreconcilably hostile to Slavery, he asserts that everywhere in the North, and especially in Pennsylvania, the supporters of Mr. BUCHANAN took the bold, distinctive ground that he was opposed to the introduction of Slavery into Kansas, and would exert the power of his Administration to bring it into the Union as a Free State. He adds:

"I tell you, gentlemen, that no issue presented by the South—nothing but the solemn pledges of his friends to the people, that he was utterly opposed to the further extension of Slavery—could have ever induced Pennsylvania to cast her electoral vote for Mr. BUCHANAN. And, to-day, there are more than one hundred thousand men within her borders who voted for him on that, and on no other issue!"

The writer predicts that Mr. BUCHANAN's administration must inevitably fail to give peace to the country,—since, if he favors Freedom in Kansas, he must deceive and alienate the South; while, if he proves "recreant to the issue upon which he alone received his support in the North, and to the solemn pledges made by his friends to the people, there will be a revolution of feeling in the ranks of the Northern Democracy that will shiver that party as a strong man would shiver an eggshell! Its adherents will not amount in numbers to a respectable foraging party."

The Mercury expresses some dissent from this strong view of Mr. BUCHANAN's pledges, and falls back upon the Cincinnati Platform for consolation. It expresses its unqualified admiration, however, for the leading position of the writer.

We presume that the letter is from an ultra Abolitionist of the Garrison school. At all events, it expresses the opinions and holds substantially the language of Mr. GARRISON himself. It is not the first time we have noticed the agreement, in opinion and purpose, of the ultra Anti-Slavery Abolitionists and the ultra Pro-Slavery Disunionists.

NEWS FROM EUROPE.—The Africa, from Liverpool on the 29th ult., brings the intelligence that to the other complications of European politics the Neufchatel question has now been added. This was to have been anticipated. The late attempt, by a handful of Prussian royalists, upon the integrity of the Swiss Republic, was an outrage that no sophistry can justify. The fillibusters were taken in the act, and are now in prison, to await their trial before a legal tribunal. In the meantime, the King of Prussia, through a special envoy, demands their unconditional liberation, and, in the event of a refusal, threatens "ulterior measures," in a mysterious sort of way. By this arrival, we learn that the Federal Council, with an independent spirit worthy the Republic's past history, unanimously refuse to give up the prisoners, and further state that preparations are being made for justice to have its course. England, and probably France, will support Switzerland in the stand she has thus taken. The other political questions of the day remain unchanged. In regard to the Bolgrad difficulty, the Paris correspondent of the London News makes the somewhat remarkable assertion that an unconstitutional influence—or, in other words, the German element in the Court of St. James—has been exercised over the English Cabinet to bias its decision in favor of Russia. It is once more announced that Herat has fallen before the Persian army.

According to the Paris correspondent of the London Times, the election of Mr. BUCHANAN in Madrid, where he is regarded as the probable successor of Espartero. The whole capital of the Atlantic Telegraph Company is said to have been subscribed, and the Directors have applications for a much larger amount. Of the £350,000, about £100,000 was taken up in the United States, and the remainder in England. The commercial news by the Africa is of considerable interest. It is confidently expected that the Bank of England will shortly reduce its rate of discount to six per cent.

CONGRESS.—In the Senate, yesterday, the Committee on Finance were directed to inquire into the expediency of suspending the duties on sugar and molasses for two years. Notice was given of a bill amendatory of the Kansas-Nebraska act. After some further business the discussion on the Message was again renewed, and Mr. CASS made his promised speech. When he had concluded, a motion to print the message prevailed, but in order that the debate might proceed, a motion was made to refer a portion of it,—so the discussion is not yet ended in the Senate. Adjourned to Monday.

In the House a memorial was presented from citizens residing on the Gadsden Purchase, asking the establishment of the Territory of Arizona. It was referred to the Committee on Territories. The consideration of the President's Message was then resumed. The discussion took a wide range in both Houses.

FROM KANSAS.—Telegraphic advices from Kansas state that sixteen of the Free-State prisoners, on trial for murder in the first degree, had been acquitted, and that nine were still on trial. The names are not given.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Mme. LA GRANGE—the most faithful, as she is the most accomplished, of prima donnas—took her farewell benefit last night. We will not do our musical public the injustice to say that they were unmindful of the occasion, although the slimness of the attendance seemed to argue that such was the case. We prefer rather to believe that the severity of the weather prevented many hundreds from going who otherwise would have done so. Still, we are a little disposed to grumble that an artist who has been so true to her duties, in foul weather and fair, should not have been deemed worthy of a slight sacrifice of personal comfort. Storm or no storm, there ought to have been a good house last night, and there was not.

The performances consisted of the "Traviata" (which as usual delighted every one) and gems from ROSSINI's "Barbiere." Both these works were rendered in an efficient way, and more than satisfied the audience. When the curtain fell on the last morceau, the friends and admirers of Italian Opera separated with the sad feeling that it might be months and months ere they met again in the same delightful rendezvous; that it might be for the last time they listened to the worthy artist whom they were assembled to honor. On Saturday Mme. LA GRANGE, with the other artists of M. MAPLESON's troupe, sails for Havana. Who knows what may happen during their absence; what ambitious man may rush into the void and once more fill it with sweet sounds? Be this as it may, we are quite sure the public will not forget the faithful exertions of Mme. LA GRANGE. Commencing her career under circumstances of no ordinary aggravation; continuing it through a period of trouble and struggle, she has from first to last proved herself a sincere, devoted, indefatigable and infallibly reliable artiste. Not once has she disappointed the public; not once has she capriciously given trouble to the management. It is in vain that we strive to recall a similar instance of unqualified, unselfish integrity. Wherever she goes, these things should be remembered and published, and especially is it her due now, when she is on the eve of departure from our midst.

THALBERG'S CONCERTS.—Mr. THALBERG gave his last concert last night, at Niblo's Garden, to a fine house. The programme was rich in musical gems, and its execution created the usual amount of enthusiasm.

Mr. THALBERG leaves for the country immediately, where he is announced to give a series of concerts, in many towns, in rapid succession. He will return here probably in February. Previous to this, however, (on the 20th of December,) he will play at a concert which GOTTSCHALK will give.

Personal.

Hon. HOWELL COBB has just issued a book from the Georgia press, for private circulation, entitled "Scriptural Examination of the Institution of Slavery," intended to prove that the development of Slavery in the United States is calculated to secure "civil and religious liberty" to the race in Africa. It is freely distributed among public men with the author's compliments.

At the recent laying of the corner stone of Pilgrim Church in London, England, a note was read from Mrs. ABBOTT LAWRENCE, of Boston, inclosing £100, and promising another £100 hereafter, towards the erection of the building. There is a spunky clergyman in the City of Dubuque, who writes to the editor of one of the newspapers, that he has been badly reported in his journal, and relieves his feelings after this peculiar fashion:

SARAH PERCIVAL;

OR,

THE BRIDE OF THE "HOUSE OF GOLD."

BY MRS. SARGENT INGRAHAM.

CHAPTER I.

It was cold, raw, November day. The air was piercing and a dreary one, that had fallen since morning, gave an aspect of desolation and dreariness to the secluded country round the little village of Mountpelier, which lay nestled in the valley below the "great house." This was the residence of a retired City merchant, who some time since had "fallen in the world," and who had made his home a perfect place of beauty. The inhabitants of the village looked up with the greatest respect to "Squire Percival" and his family. His carriage, his horses, his great dinner parties, and his elegantly dressed and mannered wife greeted her City guest with the dignity of a queen—his house and grounds—nay, even the diamond ring and pin he wore, in defiance of weather and curiosity to the simple folk who (themselves highly honored by his so-journ among them)

As for Kate Percival—the only child and rightful heiress of all this splendor, who had passed most of her life in New-York—to dance well, sing well, draw well, and converse with a grace, were all the things that she cared for.

While Kate had been absent from her parents another had been growing up in the home—though not as a daughter to them. Sarah Percival was the daughter of a younger brother of the family, who, dying poor and unfortunate, left his only child in the care of his brother Richard, with the entreaty rather than the right never miss the love and care she had always known. That prayer was faithfully answered. For Richard Percival, a cold, proud man, who could not be expected to pet and fondle a lonely child, and his stately wife looked upon her as an intruder, who might one day interfere with the plans and projects of her darling Kate.

Of the mother of this child nothing was known. Mr. Richard Percival only shook his head when any one made inquiries about her, and muttered something about "poor Frank and his unfortunate marriage." Rumor had invested the lady herself with romance and fascination, and Mrs. Percival trembled in her soul when she looked at the beautiful brunette, the image of her brother, and saw in her bright hair and large dark eyes the promise of that love-liness that won the father's heart.

Mrs. Percival had seen Sarah shaded insensibly at many a look and word of that many a taunt from the wife of her benefactor, who, if world was wise and cruel, and while her uncle was worldly kind, yet she, if needed to begin the battle, from which the poor orphan shrank, never come out victorious. "But while the world, and the immediate circle of her home, were ready to find her out into that sensitive nature, she shrank, and Destiny accomplished what perhaps herself might never have had the courage to do.

In the very prime of life—strong, healthful and hearty—the head of the family, was suddenly cut down. Of the family at home, the indulgent husband, the idolizing son, or the idolized daughter, remained but a cold, motionless body, with a shrouded face, lying quietly in one of the chambers of the great house. The servants passed about with hushed tread and quickened breath—the voices in the solitude of her own room wondered if her mistress could survive the sudden blow, if the well of the dead man was going to take from them all the joy of their lives, the idolized daughter and heiress, who used to sit and sing and dance about the handsome house, and who, if she ever came back in the gay boarding-school she had left it and in the stately home, of all who had flourished in his beauty and shared the shelter of his roof, only one had been his own child—the child was the daughter of his brother, to whom in his pride had never given a cordial word, or offered a home.

Sarah's name, had passed the lips of her uncle, and Sarah's eyes had followed the speaker with a sudden start she saw her aunt standing in the door, looking down upon the horror with a collected face.

"What are you doing here, Miss Percival?" she asked, in a freezing voice. "Why are you not in your room? The cold enough may be in the house, she stopped short, glanced at the dead, and then, with a slight shudder, added, "I did not mind the cold."

"I was wanted to see him once more," said Sarah, finding away the tears and rising to go.

"You will pardon me, Miss Percival, if I find no occasion for the extreme anxiety of grief on your part."

"Oh! don't look at me in that way," said the lady, drawing herself up in a chilly manner. "I hate hypocrisy, Miss Percival—I hate all unreal tears." "Hypocrisy! hot exactly and the words," said Sarah, "I hate you," her looks spoke as plain as words.

"Madam," she said, indignantly, "I am at a loss to understand your meaning. I have nothing to gain or lose by my uncle's death. Your uncle's fortune is, of course, all willed to his rightful heir."

Sarah looked from her arrogant face to that of the corpse before she dared to venture a reply. What would the dead man have said to a conversation like this, held over him before he was laid in his coffin?

"I am sorry if I offended you," she said, with dignity—"yet I cannot feel angry now." The presence of the dead is sacred enough to soothe the living.

Mrs. Percival cast a glance of fear toward the unconscious body of her husband, and, taking Sarah by the arm, led her to her dressing room, and shut the door.

"Now, Sarah, if you please, we will sit down here and talk of your future," said the sullen old iceberg, in a cold and unfeeling voice.

She seated herself on the sofa and motioned the girl to her side. A silence of some moments ensued. At last Sarah, looking up from the floor, found those dark eyes fixed upon her with a deep scrutiny, as if they would read her soul.

"Well," said the lady, leaning towards her, with an insolent smile, "I cannot tell of anything I am ignorant of," was the cutting reply. "My future is a mystery to me."

"If you prefer staying here, of course we will try to accommodate you. But I must tell you that neither Miss Percival nor myself purpose remaining here long after the funeral. We shall return to New-York and I shall travel and you will have no one left but the servants for company.

The proud, if a home was seemingly made in a kind way, but all the proud blood of the Percivals rushed to Sarah's cheek, at the covert impertinence of the speaker. "If I thank you, Madam," she answered, stiffly. "but I prefer returning to my friends. I cannot impose upon hospitality any longer. I will make arrangements for a future home and remove to it at once."

Mrs. Percival elevated her eyebrows superciliously.

"And may what do you intend doing, if I may be so impertinent as to ask? Doubtless you are aware that in this plain, every-day world of ours, one must either labor or be a pensioner on charity or property to support herself?"

"Of course—and I, being without the property, must of course work," was the spirited reply. "I can do it, Madam—it may seem strange and hard at first, but I shall learn after a time. And He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb will aid me."

Mrs. Percival had not the slightest objection to such an arrangement, provided she was not called upon to unloose the strings of her purse in the cause.

She sat a few moments reservedly in deep thought, and then turning to Sarah, remarked:

"You are probably aware that a city like New-York is a dangerous place for a girl of your age and—and—" she was going to add "beautiful," but checked herself and said "inexperienced," instead. "Why do you not go into some quiet country place, and try and support yourself by teaching school or something of that kind? This is almost the only respectable situation in which a young girl can establish herself now-a-days, Miss Percival?"

"I am good not an easy work," said Sarah, rising from her seat with an angry air. "If you may rest assured that I shall never trouble upon you. The money of Percival I cannot claim—of it I do not wish to be—since it was my father's inheritance. But it has never bring us happiness, Madam, I prefer to be poor and penniless than to be called sister, between us, and you may rest assured I shall not. Farewell, Madam, I shall never trouble you. There is one virtue in honest poverty and, little as you may imagine it, I shall be happier than you. Farewell, Madam, you will one day be sorry for what you have now said—you will some day be sorry that you were not kinder to the orphan children—you will one day be proud to own and claim the child, Mrs. Percival. I will not answer further."

She turned to leave the room, but the lady called her back. Perhaps, in the lonely room the proud form of her dead husband had risen before her, some remorseful thoughts had crossed her mind that she was cast out in the world alone.

"Sit down and hear me out," she said, in a softer tone than she had yet spoken. "I was very sharp, I know, but I was vexed at your—your—I was vexed at your—your—I was vexed at your—your—

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT WITH THE CITY AUTHORITIES.—[illegible] day evening, Dec. 8, Messrs. JOHN B. MYERS, President, and JOHN GILLELAN, Secretary, of the Fire Department, and John Gilbert, Secretary, and S. Greenwood, Treasurer, of the Insurance Fund of the Department, were received by the Mayor, Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen.

A communication from the Board of Trustees was read, stating that the new Building law passed at the last session of the Legislature, had been so materially altered from the original act as to create great difficulty in carrying out the practice. The communication was referred to a Committee of five, to revise the existing Fire Laws, and also on the laws organizing the Fire Commissioners, reported in favor of the existing laws being sufficient for the government of both organizations.

A communication was read from James Fenton, resigning as Trustee. Resignation accepted. Also, a communication from Adam P. Peets and Peter H. Titus, Trustees, declining a renomination. A vote of thanks was passed to each gentleman for the honorable manner in which they had discharged the duties of Trustees.

The Trustees' and Treasurer's Reports for 1856 were read and ordered on file.

TRUSTEES' REPORT FOR 1856.

The Trustees of the Fire Department Fund respectfully report: That, during the past year, nothing remarkable has occurred, beyond the ordinary operations of the Board, to direct especial attention to, except the fact that the amount of money received by the Treasurer from all sources, for the year now drawing to a close, although in the aggregate larger than in any previous year, has been met by correspondingly heavy expenditures. The total amount disbursed by the Trustees in the performance of their duties, such as in the purchase of shoes, coal, funeral expenses, payment of doctors' bills for medical attendance, widows' pensions, &c., reached the sum of TWENTY-FOUR THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND TWENTY DOLLARS AND ONE CENT.

The Treasurer had remaining in his hands last year a balance of $96 45, since which time he has received, from various sources, the sum of $24,064 90, which, in the aggregate, amounts to $24,160 35; out of which there has been expended the sum of $24,120 61, reinvested $7,000; leaving a balance, deposited in the Butchers' and Drovers' Bank to the credit of the Fire Department Fund, of $39 34. The Permanent Fund (including Trust and Special Trust Funds) now amounts to $96,750, invested as follows: $68,500 on Bond and Mortgage, and $250 in Manhattan Bank stock.

It is well known to you that the interest derived from the Permanent Fund is only about $6,500 per annum, and that, in order to meet all the demands upon the Treasury, it requires great exertions on the part of the Trustees to devise ways and means to raise a sufficient amount to cover the actual and necessary disbursements. The sum of money paid to the widows on the Pension List is over $7,000 a year; which, with the expense of coal and shoes and coal are about $4,000 more. And with the fact before us that the income derived from the Permanent Fund is entirely inadequate to cover these two items alone, it has caused the Trustees to be apprehensive that, owing to the constantly-increasing number of applicants for aid, at no distant period, if the demand upon the Treasury increases in the same ratio as in the last two years, the Trustees will be compelled to look to the Permanent Fund, unless sustained by the continued liberality of this generous-hearted community, which has so often and so nobly stretched forth its right hand to aid our institution, as in the calamitous year of 1835, when a large portion of our fund was lost in the ruin which at that time overtook many of the Fire Insurance Companies of this City.

By reference to the accompanying report of our esteemed friend, the Treasurer, it will be observed that the Department is under increased obligations to the Firemen's Ball Committee, for the exertions they put forth in behalf of the Fund—having realized from their last Annual Ball, at the Academy of Music, the handsome sum of $4,935 69. To William Niblo, Esq., and the Ravel Family, the thanks of the Department are due for a benefit at Niblo's Garden—the proceeds of which were duly paid over to the Treasurer by Zophar Mills, Esq. Donations have been received from Messrs. Phelps, Dodge & Co.; Singer & Co.; Mrs. Agnes Stuart, Gabriel Mead, the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company—all of which have been publicly acknowledged in appropriate terms, over the signature of the Treasurer.

The School Committee report, that the Van Shaick scholarships in the University are both filled. The Committee also state that, since their last annual report, they have distributed among the various beneficiaries 1,678 pair of shoes—being a much larger number than ever before given out; but when the unusual severity of the past Winter is taken into consideration, the excess is readily accounted for.

The Special Committee on Donations report, that the different City Fire Insurance Companies most promptly responded to to the solicitations of the Committee, in contributing with their accustomed liberality, while Life Insurance Companies, doing business here, with but three exceptions only, have fully complied with the requirements of the Act of the Legislature, in paying over to the Treasurer the tax imposed upon them to sustain our charity. The three exceptions alluded to, and to which your attention has been especially called, are the Agents of the following Companies, viz: Alfred Pell, the British Agent of two English Insurance Companies—the one located in London, and the other in Liverpool. Asa Bigelow is another, and is the Agent of the following Companies, viz: Merchants' Fire Insurance Company, Manufacturers' Fire Insurance Company, American Fire Insurance Company, and Boylston Fire Insurance Company, all of Boston. He is also the Agent of the Washington Fire Insurance Company, American Fire Insurance Company, and Merchants' Insurance Company, all of Providence, R. I.

Mr. James Wright, the Agent of several Fire Insurance Companies, has also failed to comply with the law. Against all of these defaulting agents suits at law have been commenced, in some of which decisions have been given in favor of the Department; but the parties to the same have appealed, and the subject is now before the last Court of Resort, where an early decision is confidently expected in our favor. The Trustees deem it to be their duty thus publicly to present to you the names of the defaulting Agents, who persist in their refusal to comply with the law. Their conduct is in striking contrast to the other Agents, who have faithfully complied with the act.

The Committee on Shoes and Coal have made the usual contracts for the ensuing year. The contract of the former stipulates to supply two thousand pair of shoes; and the latter for the delivery, in all parts of the City, of three hundred tons of coal, and upwards.

The Committee on Finance have re-invested, for bonds and mortgages canceled, the several sums paid to the Treasurer, which will be observed with reference to his report. The whole amount of the Permanent Fund is loaned on unincumbered and improved property, worth double the amount loaned, except $250 in Manhattan Bank Stock, as stated by the Treasurer.

The Committee on Fines and Penalties report progress in the various suits of law for violation of Fire Laws, instituted by direction of this Board, for the erection of dangerous buildings, &c.

The Fire Commissioners, as you are aware of, continue to perform the voluntary and onerous duties imposed upon them by their position, in hearing and disposing of the causes of difference from time to time brought to their notice; and while there may be cases of apparent hardship resulting from their decisions, it is, notwithstanding, the duty of all good firemen to acquiesce in the will of a Board of their own voluntary selection, composed of old associates, whose sole desire is to maintain the respectability of the Department, promote its welfare, and restore harmony and good fellowship among its members. The Trustees, in this connection, take pleasure in bearing their testimony to the present admirable condition of the Department. Its discipline and efficiency were never more apparent; while the zeal, activity and good order displayed by the different Companies, command the respect and confidence of the entire community.

In view of all the circumstances hereinbefore stated, the Trustees would most respectfully urge upon all the members of the Department the cultivation of a spirit of harmony and good feeling toward each other; and although the exercise of a proper degree of rivalry and emulation is commendable in itself, still, when carried to excess, it too often engenders angry altercations, leading to tumult and disorder. The quiet and orderly performance of all our duties will the best subserve the interest of the Department, and be the means of preserving and perpetuating this great and inestimable charity, the good of which we all have so much at heart.

Among the daily papers, the Sun and Herald have given liberal donations; while the press, generally, have made large deductions on their bills for printing, &c.

The terms of service of Adam P. Peets, Peter H. Titus, and Jonas N. Phillips, will expire at the annual meeting. It is, therefore, requisite to elect three Trustees for three years each.

All of which is respectfully submitted. By order of the Board of Trustees.
JAMES PRYER, President.
ALBERT J. DELATOUR, Secretary.

MEDICAL.

SANDS' SARSAPARILLA.
The special, authentic and remarkable properties of this invaluable preparation render it a safe and certain cure in cases of Scrofula, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and numerous Ulcerous and Erupt[illegible] diseases. It acts with extraordinary potency upon the fluids of the body, cleansing them from all deleterious particles, and as a restorative, disinfectant and gentle aperient stands [illegible] unequaled.
Prepared and sold by A. B. & D. SANDS, No. 100 Fulton-st., New-York. Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Sold by druggists generally.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.
He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humors. He has now in his possession over 300 certificates of its virtues, all within 20 miles of Boston.
Two bottles are warranted to cure a running sore mouth.
One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.
Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.
Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.
Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.
One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humors in the eyes.
Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.
Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.
One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.
Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.
Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most chronic case of rheumatism.
Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.
Six to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.
A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.
Reader, I could give you a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in my own family, and I do not hesitate to say, no more will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me singular—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until it discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.
In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I bottled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.
No change of diet nor inconvenience—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.
DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 9 years dessert spoonful; children from 5 to 9 years, tea-spoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.
Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.
Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 150 Warren-st., Roxbury, Mass. Price $1.
MARSH, ORVIS & CO., No. 150 Greenwich-st.; BOYD & PAUL, Chatham-st.; F. C. WELLS & CO., Frankfort-st.; MORRISON, ROBBINS & CO., No. 115 Maiden-lane; HAVILAND, HARTZ & RISLEY, Warren-st.; WARD, CLOSE & CO., Maiden-lane; and retailed by all respectable Druggists.

NEW AND IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN THE SCIENCE OF MEDICINE.—TRIESEMAR'S Nervous Invigorating Cordial, the only remedy for the Patent Office of England, the Scale of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Vienna, are fixed upon each wrapper, and around each case.
Sold by Dr. H. A. BARROW—Member of the Imperial College of Vienna, and Royal College of Surgeons, London, who may be personally consulted at his residence, No. 112 Prince-st., (two blocks west of Broadway,) New-York, from 11 o'clock in the morning till 2, and from 4 o'clock till 8 in the evening, (Sundays excepted.)
TRIESEMAR No. 1.—Is the remedy of general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c.; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the married state.
TRIESEMAR No. 2—Entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copaiva and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the community.
TRIESEMAR No. 3—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which, unfortunately, the English physician treats with mercury to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.
TRIESEMAR Nos. 1, 2, and 3, are prepared in the form of a lozenge, devoid of taste or smell, and can be carried in the waistcoat pocket. Sold in six cases and divided in separate doses, as directed before by Vincent Lallemand, Rous, Ricord, &c. Price of each, or four cases in one for $6, which saves $3; and in $27 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9.
Special arrangements having been made with the various Expresses, the nine-dollar cases of the Triesemar, and the larger sizes, will be forwarded by Dr. Barrow, carriage paid, immediately on receiving a remittance, to any part of the world, securely packed, and addressed according to the instructions of the writer, thus securing to the public genuine European preparations, and effectually protecting them from spurious and pernicious imitations. The three-dollar cases sent as usual, but not free of carriage.
Dr. H. A. BARROW, No. 151 Prince-st., (two blocks west of Broadway,) New-York.

CHRONIC AND CONSTITUTIONAL DISEASES.—DR. RALPH, No. 12 Houston-st., near Wooster, (at home till 1 and after 6 o'clock, Sundays excepted,) invites the attention of sufferers from stricture, in every stage, to his peculiar and eminently successful treatment. From long application and extended experience in this complaint, he can guarantee perfect and radical cures, without painful operations, nauseous medicines or troublesome restrictions. The sympathetic or distant symptoms of this disease are generally misunderstood. Pain or weakness in the back, bad memory, loss of mental energy, and inaptitude for business or pleasure, genital debility, costiveness, dyspepsia, may all depend upon a stricture as their hidden cause, long before it affects the urinary stream; and, especially when there has been previous disease, such symptoms should lead to the question, whether this be their real cause. With its cures these symptoms quickly disappear. Letters, to insure attention, must inclose a fee. Address Box No. 809 Post-Office.

$1,000 FORFEITED AND NO CHARGE UNLESS CURED.—Dr. HUNTER cures when the treatment of other physicians and all other remedies fail. His Red Drop is your only reliance for a thorough cure, in certain diseases. No. 3 Division-st.; the only place now so well known for the very extraordinary cures it has performed, without diet or hindrance from business, when all other remedies only drive the disease in the blood, to ruin. This secures the patient from secondary attacks, and is the only remedy on earth that does it. Try all others and see. Beware of a handbill stating Dr. Hunter has removed. It is a villainous deception. Consultation private. Book gratis.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. WATSON has for a long series of years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than twenty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. The remedies are mild, and there is no interruption to business or change of diet. Dr. Watson is in constant attendance, from 7 in the morning until 9 at night, at his consulting rooms and residence, No. 25 Walker-st., a few doors west of Broadway. The consulting rooms are separate. WM. WATSON, M. D.,
Formerly Surgeon to the Lock Hospital.

DR. WATSON'S NEW WORK.—"THE CAUSE AND CURE"—A complete practical treatise on spermatorrhœa and premature exhaustion, with local debility, induced by early indiscretion, excess, or other causes, in which the nature and effects of this insidious malady, together with the treatment, are fully explained; illustrated by numerous anatomical plates and drawings. With a supplement on genito urinary diseases. Price, $1. To be had of the author, who may be consulted confidentially, at No. 25 Walker-st., a few doors west of Broadway.

DR. LAMONT'S PARIS AND LONDON MEDICAL ADVISER AND MARRIAGE GUIDE. 200th edition, 400 pages, 100 electro-type illustrations, cloth, $1. It gives the advertised remedies, and shows the superiority of the author's Paris and London treatment of emissions, impotency, strictures, gleet, &c. He cures all such diseases at No. 52 Mercer-st., corner of Spring, opposite St. Nicholas Hotel, from 10 A. M. until 9 P. M. We recommend Dr. LAMONT to the afflicted.—Courrier des State Unis, Staats Zeitung, Day Book, Democrat, &c.

DOCTOR WATKINSON'S PULMONACIA—For the cure of consumption, needs only a trial to be pronounced the best and only medicine in the world for the cure of consumption and all internal diseases of the throat and lungs. Price $1 per bottle, for sale only at No. 448 Broadway.

DENTISTRY.

CONTINUOUS GUM TEETH.—THE SUIT lately pending against me in the United States Circuit Court, for an infringement of the patent of ALLEN's Continuous Gum Teeth, having been decided in my favor, I am now prepared to manufacture full or partial sets of my improved Continuous Gum Teeth, on my improved atmospheric pressure plates, which are superior to any now in use, and which can be inserted with or without extracting the roots. Persons in want of artificial teeth can save 50 per cent, by calling at my office, where specimens of all the new styles of Dentistry can be seen. Having every facility, I am now prepared to manufacture for the profession, or give instruction in the art. I have recently discovered a new process of benumbing the gums for the extraction of teeth, and which can be used in all cases without the slightest pain to the patient. It is entirely different from the process of freezing the gums, which can only be used in few cases, and generally produces more pain than the extraction of the tooth.

NEW-YORK CITY.

[illegible] Committee of this City to aid the Poor of Paris, recently arrived from Cayenne [illegible] Hospitable Mansion. There were [illegible] Cayenne refugees, who were received in the City, were there, and excited [illegible] and sympathy.

A meeting was organized by appointment of Wm. H. Prescott, Esq., President of the Central Relief Committee on Guiana, and election of Edward F. Cornwall as Secretary.

Expressions of sympathy with the exiles were passed. The last read as follows:

Resolved, That a Committee of Five be appointed by this meeting to procure employment and permanent aid for the exiles of France recently arrived from Cayenne.

Messrs. John A. Kennedy, Ex-Alderman James Kelly, Edgar Kingsley, Benjamin F. Manierre, and Robert C. McCormick, Jr., were chosen a Committee to carry out the intentions of this resolution.

Speeches were made by several present, Mr. Lewis H. Boutet and Col. Fouche.

Gen. Wool proposed, as the best way to raise the means, that the services of Mr. Wm. H. Fry be secured to deliver a public lecture in the Broadway Tabernacle, on Louis Napoleon, at twenty-five cents a head.

This proposition met with favor at once, and a Committee was appointed to invite Mr. Fry. Adjourned.

Fires.

The alarm of fire at 11¾ o'clock last evening in the Museum Theatre was caused by the explosion of a gasometer lamp at No. 26 Ann-street. No one was injured.

The large first-class school building erecting on the site of the old Methodist Church, on Christopher-st, near Hudson, is nearly inclosed. There is no cellar under the building, the ground having been used for burial purposes heretofore, and the remains of over 100 bodies, taken therefrom, are deposited in a vault built under the north-east wing. By the terms of the contract this building was to have been completed by the 1st of January, 1857. The contract was [illegible] per day for all the time the building remained after this date. From present appearances, and after considerable inquiry, the probabilities are that the house will not be ready to open before next July. Will the Board hold the contractors to their terms of agreement? This is the only way to save the public from a fleecing.

The Ladies' Fair, in behalf of a new Women's Hospital—Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, and friends—opened last night at Stuyvesant Institute. Despite the severe storm, very auspiciously, over $[illegible] being realized from the sales of the first evening before all of the articles were displayed. The visitors were mostly from among our wealthy and fashionable citizens. The Fair will be open to-morrow, when current new contributions will be exhibited.

The Trustees of the Society Library have taken full possession of their beautiful new building in University-place, and are now comfortably out of debt, brave, and much better.

We are indebted to Capt. Shannon, of steamship Africa, for favors shown our news collector yesterday, while boarding his vessel at Quarantine.

Coroner's Inquest.

Coroner Connolly held an inquest yesterday at Pier No. 1 East River, on the body of an unknown man which had been found floating in the water at the foot of the pier. The deceased was apparently about thirty years old, 5 feet 8 inches high, stout built, with light hair and whiskers and dark complexion. He was dressed in red under-flannel shirt, a blue striped cotton shirt, dark twilled woolen pants, blue overalls, over the pocket of which were two small pockets, coarse shoes and woolen stockings. A leather belt was around his waist, and his pantaloons had a small old hole in one of his pockets was [illegible] The deceased had evidently been in the water some time, as decomposition had already commenced. No marks of violence appeared upon the body. Verdict, accidental drowning.

River Thieves.

On Thursday night, about 11 o'clock, a well-known river thief boarded the British bark Lancaster, Captain Gibson, lying at the foot of James-street, East River, and succeeded in taking away a warp of manila line. He was pursued by Mr. George Garlands, watchman of the vessel, who captured him at the end of the pier, when a number of the thief's accomplices rushed up and wrested the prisoner from the officer. Mr. G. was severly beaten by them, and during the scuffle fired two shots at the thieves, and he thinks one was wounded, but they all made good their escape.

Mr. Burton: Having been absent for some time at three years from your City, I was astonished at the great changes so few years have wrought; many of the old landmarks have been removed to give place for handsome edifices, or they have been so much altered they can hardly be recognised. On looking for my friends nearly all have removed, and with great difficulty I am enabled to find them. Some few are still at their old places; among others I find my old and industrious friends, Nathan, Lane & Co., (formerly Lammont & Lane,) who have, by their economy and industry, gradually enlarged by some 20 years labor what would now be called quite a small establishment to one of the first in the City. I recollect seeing them from early morn until late at night at their old stand, No. 69 Wall-street, which they have occupied some 20 years or more, where I was pleased to find them on hand, prepared with their large and increasing stock of blank books and stationery at the shortest notice to furnish companies or individual firms with part or complete sets of books of the best material and workmanship. I can, with confidence, recommend all who may be in want to call upon them, (having used their books for many years,) knowing that what they may purchase from them can be relied upon. Mr. Editor, I like to see small industry rewarded, and hope my friends will not fail to make them an early call.

Yours, respectfully, J. G. M.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Stabbing Case.

The person who stabbed Joseph Collins, one of the hands employed on the Jersey City ferry-boats, on Wednesday evening, is Samson Austin, a packet, employed at No. 50 Vesey-street, New-York, and resided at No. 149 Railroad-avenue, Jersey City. He was brought before Recorder Bedford yesterday morning, who committed him to jail for trial.

Fire.

The barn of H. M. Trapelagen, at the corner of Prospect and North-Second-street, was burned on Wednesday night.

Marine Items.

The steamer Africa reached her dock, at Jersey City, at 4½ o'clock P. M. yesterday. The telegraph being down, and the weather very thick, her guns off the Battery were the first intimation of her arrival. She was delayed nearly an hour in getting into her berth, on account of a schooner being anchored in the mouth of her slip, which the heavy blow prevented from being moved. She brings 42 passengers, among whom we notice Capt. John McKay. We append a list below, for which we are indebted to the Purser, as well as for the following

MEMORANDA.

Nov. 30, 4:51 A. M., passed the Royal Mail steamer Canada, from Boston.

Dec. 1, lat. 51° 22', long. 140 47', passed the American ship Edward O'Brien, bound east. Same day passed a steamer, bound east, supposed to be the Baltic.

We find in the Liverpool Journal, Nov. 29, the following item, referring to the boat picked up by the ship Neptune, from New-York: "A boat belonging to the Maria, from Porto Plata to Hambro, (condemned at Havana,) in which were two chronometers, a spyglass and several papers, was picked up about the 8th of November, in lat. 41° N., lon. 65° W., by the Neptune, arrived here." As this is unquestionably the boat already spoken of as belonging to the Lycoming, we presume the statement above cannot be true. But this statement fixes the latitude and longitude of the spot where the boat was found, which were not given in Capt. Freeborn's letter.

From the same paper we learn that part of the crew of an American vessel, bound from Bristol, with iron, which had gone down in the Northeast Trades, are on board the Mary Robinson, which arrived at Deal on Monday, Nov. 24.

The Louisiana, for New-Orleans, on shore on Little Burbo, had gone to pieces.

The S. M. Fox, in same place, was not breaking up as reported; a flat was alongside saving cargo.

Steam-tug and flat from the Silas Wright, at this port, (Liverpool,) with rigging, &c., a few cases and bales of goods.

MAN LOST OVERBOARD.

Arrived, schooner Charlotte Minerva, Stirup, from Baracoa, Nov. 28, with fruit to J. Enegas. Left schooner Dandrop, to load with tobacco and fruit, for New-York; and bark Mary Maria, loaded and ready to sail, for London. The weather had been very bad, and business dull. Capt. Stirup reports heavy N. N. W. gales since he came north of Hatteras. On Saturday morning, the 6th inst., Edward Townsend, colored, cook of the vessel, fell overboard and was drowned. He was about 35 years of age, and belonged to Canada West.

The man had been called at 5 o'clock to get some hot coffee for the man at the wheel, the weather being very cold, and after he came on deck with a light with the intention of kindling a fire in the galley; the next the mate saw of him he was groping along aft on all fours, it being still dark, and as he came near the quarter rail, he was called out to by the mate to stop, but he had scarcely spoken when he saw him fall—clutch the rail and drop over the quarter. The vessel was put about, and every effort made to save him without effect. He was near-sighted, and it is said he could not swim.

HEAVY LOSSES AT SEA—UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED VESSELS LOST.

The advices that have lately been received at Lloyd's furnish a fearful catalogue of losses at sea. During the last eight or ten days no fewer than 104 losses have been recorded on the books. Amongst the number are three steamers. Nor is this the extent of the disasters, for we find nearly 500 casualties reported during the same period. Happily, however, the loss of life has been comparatively small.

MURDER BY AN OFFICER ON AN AMERICAN SHIP.

The American ship Neptune arrived in our river on Tuesday. As soon as the crew got ashore, information was given at the Police-Office, Dale-street, that the third mate, James C. Collins, had murdered a Dutch seaman, who went by the name of John Smith, and thrown him overboard on the voyage here. Inspector Murphy was authorised to make inquiries, and he found that the allegation was well-founded. It appeared that, on the 24th instant, as the vessel was in the Channel, the third mate had an altercation with Smith in the forecastle, and he finished by strangling him and then throwing his body overboard. The seamen allege, also, that the third mate's conduct was generally brutal, violent and tyrannical in the extreme—he having treated most of them with great personal violence. On Wednesday, Inspector Murphy went to the ship to arrest the third mate. The Captain, Mr. Freeborn, rendered every assistance. He was brought to the main bridewell, where he will remain until instructions are received from the American Consul to transfer him to other custody. The prisoner is a stoutly-built man, of about 36 years of age.—Liv. Journal, Nov. 29.

EXPLOSION.

British R. M. steamer Parana, while lying in the Southampton Dock, trying her engines preparatory to sailing with the W. I. mail of Dec. 2, exploded her boiler and four persons were scalded to death. The Plata was to take her place.

Obituary.

DEATH OF HON. SIDNEY WILLARD.

The Boston papers announce the death of Hon. Sidney Willard, aged 78 years. He was son of Rev. Joseph Willard, formerly minister in Beverly, and subsequently, for nearly a quarter of a century, President of Harvard College. In December, 1806, he was elected Hancock Professor of Hebrew and other Oriental Languages in Harvard College, and was inaugurated in February of the following year. This office he held until 1853, discharging its duties with great fidelity and ability. He was the last male of the collegiate government dating the first quarter of the present century. His death will be deeply regretted.

DEATH OF MAJOR LOUIS GALLY.

The New-Orleans Picayune says: "This sad event, though a long time looked for, has cast a gloom over this community and a keen sense of bereavement. Major Gally was one of our oldest and most respected citizens. We believe he was, in his earlier years, a soldier of the great Napoleon, and his pride in all that pertained to military show never deserted him. For more than twenty-five years he has commanded the Orleans Battalion of Artillery—a body of our citizen soldiery so long as honor to New-Orleans. Major Gally was, indeed, the father of the Battalion, and was mainly instrumental in bringing it to its present state of discipline and efficiency. His comrades in arms will long revere his memory. And when St. Barbe's Day arrives, (the 4th day of the Battalion,) he will be missed and remembered. When Gen. Taylor went, in 1845, to Corpus Christi, at the commencement of the war with Mexico, the first artillery he had were the guns of Major Gally's command, while Gally and his men were there to serve them."

The Railroad Collision at Alliance.

FULL PARTICULARS—DESCRIPTION OF THE TERRIFIC SCENE—HEROIC DEATH OF A FLAGMAN—THE KILLED AND WOUNDED—FLIGHT OF THE ENGINEER.

The telegraph has already given us a very full account of the terrible railroad collision at Alliance. The following particulars we copy from the Pittsburg Dispatch of Dec. 10:

"It is almost impossible to depict with anything like truthfulness, the scene which presented itself to our view upon arriving at Alliance. The station house, a large octagonal building, stands in the eastern obtuse angle formed by the crossing of the Pittsburg and Cleveland, and the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroads. It appears that the train on the latter road was just starting westward, the passengers having supped, when the train on the Pittsburg and Cleveland road came up at lightning speed and dashed through it, striking the front corner of the rear car and the rear corner of the car in front of it, both filled with passengers going westward. The force of the collision was most terrific. The first-named car was precipitated into the public reception-room of the station, carrying with it three sides of the octagonal building from floor to ceiling, and crushing the platform in front and timbers into kindling wood. The rear of the other car was taken by the locomotive—the coupling irons being shivered to atoms, and thrown some thirty or forty feet distant, the ends of the car being reversed from the position in which they were standing when the accident occurred. Upon the platform, between the westward-going train and the station-house, were standing a large number of persons, most of them awaiting the arrival of the very train which did the fatal mischief, and in the twinkling of an eye a number of them were hurried into eternity.

Dr. Smith, a young physician of Alliance, and wife were standing together upon the platform. Her crushed and mutilated form was taken from under the platform, and partially under the floor of the reception room, while his was found under the upper car, forty or fifty feet distance. Dr. Smith formerly resided in Salem, Ohio, was but a short time married, and was but just entering upon the practice of his profession. The two bodies were conveyed to their late residence, which an hour before they had left, full of health, and hope, and happiness.

Mr. N. G. Taylor, a young merchant of Philadelphia, was standing near the same spot, and was so badly crushed that he breathed his last in a few minutes after being taken into the ladies' waiting-room, manifesting no evidence of consciousness whatever. It appears from the papers found in his possession that he was on a solitary tour. Among his effects were found money and valuable papers to the amount of $8,000 or $10,000, a valuable gold watch, and a couple of packages, all of which were sealed in the presence of several gentlemen and placed in charge of Mr. D. Sourbrok, of the Alliance Hotel, which is an all-sufficient guarantee that they will be safely delivered to proper persons to receive them.

In the same room was the body of Mr. John Brooks, of New-Jersey, who is also said to have been standing upon the platform of the station when he met his death, and was thrown or crushed against the building by the car. This young man was to have been married on this day to a young lady residing in the Western part of Ohio, so we were informed. This, which was to have been a day of joy is turned to one of sorrow by the inscrutible hand of Providence.

If the account given to us be correct, and it was given by eye-witnesses of the occurrence, Jacob Rudy, a German, the flagman of the station—the shapeless fragments of whose body we saw lying on a board in a large warehouse near the station—died as a hero dies. He saw the train approaching with the speed of lightning; he saw the danger of the crowd upon the platform, and of those in the train which was leaving—he rushed with the lantern and his signal waving, up the track, directly fronting the death-dealing locomotive, and it struck him—carried him between the cars; tore him limb from limb actually tore his noble heart out, which was found with his lungs lying twenty or thirty yards from his body, which was dragged from under the baggage car a torn and bleeding mass of shapeless human flesh. In the agony of his fear for others he had forgotten himself. Such conduct is worthy of a monument of marble. His body, or rather what remained of it, presented a most shocking spectacle. One of his arms was torn off, his head and the upper part of his body had lost every distinguishing feature of humanity. His young wife, about to become a mother, came down in the morning to see her husband. God help her in her sore distress. She was formerly a waiter at the hotel, and they had been but a short time married. It is said that this poor fellow had eighty or ninety dollars in gold upon his person, which had not been found at the time we left; but for this fact we do not vouch.

In the same warehouse where Rudy's body lay, were those of J. Atterholt and King Watson, two carpenters in the employment of one of the Railroad Companies. Both these were standing upon the platform of the station-house at the time of the occurrence, but their bodies were found under the front of the locomotive, the wheels of which were clotted with their blood. Mr. Atterholt was a large, fine-looking man, from New-Garden, Ohio. He leaves a wife and three children. Mr. Watson was a young unmarried man, a relative of Mr. Wm. Ritchie, of New-Garden, Ohio, whose name was erroneously telegraphed as one of the killed. It was Mr. Watson, not Mr. Ritchie, who met his death.

Mr. M'Intyre, of Alliance, also a carpenter, was also killed upon the platform, although his body was found some distance from it, and taken to his residence.

All about the locality where the occurrence took place, were pools of blood and fragments of human bodies and bones. Upon the platform was found a coat which had all the appearance of having been ground through a paper-mill. A crushed bonnet was pulled from among the fragments of the broken platforms, and the sole of a boot, which had been forced entire from the owner's foot, was lying near it. On a piece of an iron wheel we saw a portion of a human skull and one of the spinal vertebræ.

The force of the concussion must have been most tremendous. Aside from the torn building and crushed platform, there were evidences of this on every side. The trucks upon which the passenger cars were placed were smashed to pieces. Even the heavy iron axles were snapped off like pipe-stems. Some of them were broken in two places, and the wheels were shattered like China-ware. The train of the Cleveland road, after passing through the other train, ran 120 feet, and stopped upon the track, the truck under the locomotive being broken, and the baggage car and tender being thrown off the track by the breaking or shifting of the switch. The locomotive was not apparently damaged to the extent of more than four or five hundred dollars. The locomotive striking, as it did, between them, (the bodies of the passenger cars of the Pittsburg and Chicago Road,) they were not very badly broken up, except at the immediate points where the locomotive hit them. The point of collision being thus between the cars, accounts for one of the strangest facts connected with the whole matter, and that is, that out of the eight persons killed, not one, so far as we could learn upon the most diligent inquiries, was in the cars. Mr. Brooks, of New-Jersey, was the only one killed who is not positively known to have been outside the cars, and several persons assert that he was on the platform also, while none of the persons who were in the cars can recollect seeing him there.

The wounded as well as the dead were most promptly, properly and carefully cared for.

Mr. Marcus A. Root, the well-known daguerreotypist of Philadelphia, has his left thigh fractured, but it had been set, and he was cheerful and bore his mishap with manly fortitude. From him we learned particulars of the accident. He was standing on the platform beside his fellow-townsman, Mr. Taylor, when he met his death, and appeared deeply gratified for the escape he himself had made.

Mr. Fielding Cavanagh, of Columbus, Indiana, his wife and her mother, Mrs. Anne Armor, were in one of the cars, and were all three badly bruised, but not so seriously, it was thought by the medical men, as to endanger their lives. The latter was advanced in age, and seemed to be considerably shaken by the accident.

Mr. Charles Hester, a young man residing in Alliance, was also pretty badly injured. He was taken to his father's house. We saw several others who had received slight wounds and bruises, but none who were seriously injured other than those we have named.

The cause of the accident is attributed, by every person who saw it, and with whom we conversed, to John Cherry, the engineer upon the train on the Cleveland and Pittsburg Road. This man has not been seen since the accident. When his engine stopped, or was stopped, we cannot tell which, he left the train, and, as we were informed, after consulting with some of his friend at Alliance, who had advised him to flee, walked to Lima, a small place about four miles distant from Alliance, on the Cleveland and Pittsburg Road, where he took the train and went to Cleveland. We give this as we heard it, but do not vouch for its correctness. What was his motive, or whether he had any motive or not for so doing, we cannot say, but all who saw the accident concur in saying that he ran down the grade and into the Pittsburg train, at a speed of not less than thirty miles an hour, and some say at from thirty-five to forty miles an hour.

The feeling against Mr. Cherry, at Alliance, was very strong. We heard one man say, and he looked and spoke as though he meant it, "That it was well for the engineer that he had made his escape, otherwise there would have been another dead body added to the number." But let the law take its course.

Mr. Webster to John Lathrop of Boston.

Washington, April, 1836.

Sir:—For having declined to comply with your demand of pecuniary in the House, for an explanation of words of a general nature, used in debate, you now "demand of me that explanation which your insulted feelings require," and refer me to your friend, Mr. ——. I presume, sir, he is in the bearer of your note, for such arrangements as are usual.

This demand for explanation, you, in my judgment, as a matter of right, were not entitled to make on me, nor were the temper and style of your own reply to my own objection to the sugar tax of a character to induce me to accord it as a matter of courtesy.

Neither can I, under the circumstances of the case, recognize in you a right to call me to the field to answer what you may please to consider an insult to your feelings.

It is unnecessary for me to state other and obvious considerations growing out of this case. It is enough that I do not feel myself bound at all times, and under any circumstances, to accept from any man, who shall choose to risk his own life, an invitation of this sort; although I shall be always prepared to repel, in a suitable manner, the aggression of any man who may presume upon such a refusal.

Your obedient servant,
DANIEL WEBSTER.

High Prices of Provisions in Minnesota.—The Burlington Gazette learns from Hastings, (30 miles below St. Paul,) that the river at that point has closed, and in consequence thereof, provisions had advanced very much. He states that flour was selling at Hastings for $10 per barrel, pork $30 per barrel, butter 50 cents per pound, and every other article in proportion, and it was thought by all that prices would be much higher during the Winter.

Thursday, Dec. 11—P. M.

The Cunard Steamship Africa arrived at her dock, Jersey City, about 5 o'clock this afternoon,—with dates from Liverpool to the forenoon of the 29th ult. Her mail advices are three days later than those received by the Atlantic. Their political importance is very slight; but in a commercial point of view, they are encouraging. The London and Paris money news makes mention of a steady improvement in the financial affairs of both capitals. The Bank of England had secured a considerable portion of the recent receipts of gold, and although no change had been announced in its minimum rate of discount, there were strong expectations of a speedy recurrence to 6 ⅌ cent. The latest official return showed an increase of about $1,067,345 in the stock of bullion in the Bank. The Bank of France, having also acquired some strength from the recent receipts of gold, as well as from other sources, was beginning to accumulate specie, and we are advised that the French Government are again considering the question of adopting an exclusively gold standard. The demand for Money in London had slightly increased, but towards the close of the 28th ult., there were symptoms of renewed ease,—and the latest cash price of Consols was from 94¼@94⅝. For American securities, a moderate inquiry prevailed, and the tendency of prices was upwards. The reports from the English manufacturing districts are similar to those received by the Atlantic; while [illegible] gold Cotton market,—the week's sales amounting to [illegible] bales, with a decline of [illegible] ⅌ lb. in prices of the lower grades of American. Middling Uplands closed at 6¾d., and Middling Orleans at 6⅞d. ⅌ lb. Breadstuffs were not pressed on the market,—but they were in slack request, and had given way in price. Flour had fallen 1s. ⅌ bbl. during the week, and Corn was 2d.@6d. lower, ex ship. No change of moment in Wheat. American Provisions were rather brisker, but not generally dearer. Tallow had materially improved, while other articles of American Produce were selling to a fair extent at steady prices.
